AUTO COLLIDES WITH POLICEMAN SLAYING HORSE

Driver Later Jailed When He Asks About Girl Companion in Auto.

POLICE CAUSE WOMAN TO ESCAPE HOSPITAL

RIGGS ROAD IS SCENE OF STRANGE ACCIDENT

A mounted policeman was injured seriously and his horse killed when struck by a high-powered automobile last night on Riggs road northwest near the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Bridge.

The driver of the machine is being held by police, who are searching for his woman companion, believed to to have been seriously injured in the crash.

William R. Sheets, of the Thirteenth Precinct, is the injured policeman. Sheets, who is 33 years old, is being treated at Walter Reed Hospital for a dislocated right shoulder, severe head lacerations, probable internal injuries and lacerations and bruises to his hips.

Stewart K. Hill, 26 years old, of 3509 Fourteenth street northwest, driver of the automobile, is being held without bond at the Thirteenth Precinct pending the outcome of Sheets' injuries.

Hill was arrested at Emergency Hospital, shortly before 11 o'clock and two hours after the accident, when he called to inquire whether his woman companion in the accident had been treated. He refused to reveal the identity of his companion, who was taken to Emergency Hospital in a passing automobile, but fled when she saw the Fourth Precinct patrol at the emergency entrance.

Woman Badly Injured.

Wallace Jarrett, of 625 Emerson street northwest, whom Hill hailed at the scene of the accident and requested that his companion be taken to Emergency Hospital, told police the woman's clothing was covered with blood and she appeared to be seriously injured. Jarrett said he was unable to learn the woman's identity.

Shortly after Hill hailed a passing motorist, who took Sheets to the hospital, Hill called police of the Thirteenth Precinct, told them his name, reported the accident and said he would give himself up as soon as he "got fixed up."

It was nearly two hours later that Hill appeared at the Emergency Hospital with another employe of the Mount Pleasant Motor Co. and inquired about his woman companion. Lieut. William Holmes and Sergt. James Lee, of the Third Precinct, were stationed at the hospital by Police Inspector Louis J. Stoll, to await for Hill or his companion.

Hill Escape Try Told.

When Hill saw the police, Lieut Holmes said, he tried to leave the hospital, but was taken into custody and turned over to Headquarters Detective Sergt. Charles W. Weber. Despite lengthy questioning, Hill refused to identify his companion, other than to say he believed she was a "New Yorker" and that he had "picked her up early in the evening somewhere between the Union Station and the Capitol."

Sheets was riding east on Riggs road when the accident occurred. The automobile, driven by Hill, crashed into Sheets' horse from behind. Thrown from his saddle by the impact, Sheets narrowly missed falling under the wheels of the car. He landed on his right shoulder and the side of his head and was stunned by the force with which he struck the roadway.

Hill's machine, carrying dealer's tags, was badly damaged. A wrecking automobile was called to tow it away.

Mounted Policeman H. C. Cheeney, also of the Thirteenth Precinct, who lives near the scene of the accident, shot the horse, which was horribly mangled.

Blaze Kills Two Men When Plane Crashes

Grand Island, Nebr., June 2 (A.P.).—Myron Robb, Nelson, Nebr., and Orville Wittwer, Red Cloud, Nebr., aviation students, were killed and their bodies partly cremated, and Howard Wilson, Lebanon, Kans., was seriously burned and cut when an airplane piloted by Wilson went into a tail spin and crashed to the ground near the Grand Island Airport late today.

The plane fell into a power line carrying 2,300 volts and caught fire.

Wilson was flying low on account of the threatening weather. He had but a few hours to fly to be entitled to a pilot's license. He was the owner of the ill-fated plane which he flew yesterday for the first time.

Helen Wills Retains French Tennis Title

Mme. Mathieu Defeated, 6–3, 6–4; Cochet Bows to Jean Borotra.

Paris, June 2 (A.P.).—For the second straight year Helen Wills, California's queen of the courts, won the women's singles title at the French hard court tennis championships today.

In a slashing match in which power of stroke predominated, Miss Wills defeated Mme. Rene Mathieu, ranking No. 1 French player, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4, in the final round.

The American, French and British women's champion saved her best tennis for the final day. Although Mme. Mathieu put up a gallant fight, Miss Wills, in the opinion of all the experts assembled here, demonstrated that she dominates feminine tennis just as loftily as did her former rival, Susanne Lenglen some years ago. Regrets have been expressed that the Helen of 1919 can not meet the Susanne of 1926, not a few believing that the American would defeat the French woman.

Although the finals of the women's singles held a major share of interest among the 12,000 spectators—the largest crowd that ever saw a tennis match in France—Jean Borotra, the "bounding Basque," sprang a stunning upset when his eliminated fellow musketeer, Henry Cochet, ranking No. 1 player of the world, in the semi-finals of the men's singles. Borotra pulled out the match by scores of 6—3, 5—7, 7—5, 5—7, 6—4, to gain the right to meet Rene Coste, another of the great French Davis Cut Team, for the title tomorrow.

The match between Miss Wills and Mme. Mathieu brought together two of

BOY CANOEIST OF 15 DROWNS IN POTOMAC

Franklin Greatorex Is River Victim When He Slips Between Canoes.

SECOND CASE ONLY SCARE

Franklin Greatorex, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Greatorex, of 15 Evarts street northeast, was drowned soon after noon yesterday in the Potomac River near Three Sisters Islands, a short distance from Key Bridge.

Dragging of the river bottom by harbor police and intensive search by volunteers of the water and both shores for a considerable distance failed to reveal the body.

Harbor police likewise spent a busy afternoon in tracking down a report that another lad in a bathing suit had vanished after leaving a pair of khaki trousers in a boathouse and soft drink establishment of Joseph Mackey at Rosslyn Saturday afternoon.

The mystery was solved when Bob Glass, son of Maj. and Mrs. Ralph R. Glass, of 1316 Nineteenth street northwest, upon his location through copies of a Washington advertising pamphlet in the pockets, claimed the property. He explained that he had returned to the boathouse later Saturday afternoon and apparently had failed to pack the trousers with other equipment in a camp blanket he carried.

Young Greatorex, an eighth grade pupil at the Immaculate Conception School and a Postal messenger in his spare time, met his death while frolicking with a party of several boys of his own age in two canoes in the deep waters swirling around the three rocks in midstream.

Meager reports gained by harbor police differed somewhat with those obtained by newspaper men.

The police were told that Greatorex, playing in his bathing suit, slipped into the water while attempting to step from a canoe occupied also by Luther Bauplitz, 15 years old, of 1716 North Capitol street, to another canoe occupied by Charles Freer, 15 years old, of 2705 North Capitol street, and Eric Bombard, 16 years old, of 17 Channing street northeast.

Two other 15-year-old youths told officers they were near by when the accident occurred. They gave their names as Henry Lohr, of 12 Evarts street northeast, and Raymond Mattigan, of 47 Girard street northwest.

Occupants of motor boats and canoes who rushed to the scene at the cries of alarm told newspaper men the boys

MRS. CASSLER HELD IN MURDER OF GIRL

ONCE SENTENCED TO DIE

Chicago, June 2 (A.P.).—Mrs. Katherine Cassler, 41, once sentenced to death for murder, later freed, was held in connection with a second slaying today, following identification of a girl's body, found in a swamp near Hebron, Ind., as that of Miss Cameo Soutor, pretty 24-year-old year domestic, who had acted as housekeeper for Mrs. Cassler's husband, Trueman.

Mrs. Cassler was arrested last night, after Charles Johnson, 24, a professional skater, who described himself as a former sweetheart of the slain girl, told police the latter had been severely beaten recently by Mrs. Cassler for alleged intimacy with Cassler.

Mrs. Cassler was convicted of slaying Walter Lindstrom, a cabinet maker, three years ago in an insurance conspiracy, and was sentenced to death. She obtained a new trial and was freed a month ago after spending the interim in prison.

The day after she left prison, Mrs. Cassler learned of intimacy between her husband and the slain girl and attacked the latter, according to Johnson's story to police.

Miss Gladys Shaw, of Springfield, Mo., who said she was a friend and confidante of Miss Soutor, told police the slain girl continued to see Cassler after the beating was administered. Miss Shaw said she last saw Miss Soutor alive a week ago. She was then on her way to visit Mrs. Cassler

Three Persons Killed In Crossing Collision

Monterey, Md., June 2 (A.P.).—Three persons were killed at a grade crossing here tonight when their automobile was struck by a Western Maryland train.

The dead, a man identified as Morris F. Watts, of Baltimore, and two women, were so badly mangled that identification was almost impossible. The man's identity was learned through an auto operator's license found in his pocket and the license tags on the demolished machine.

Ill Policeman Leaves Bed To Fire at Fleeing Suspect

Aroused from a sick bed by a street fight near his home, Policeman William L. Danley, of the Fourth Precinct, took a random shot at a man who is said to be wanted in the Green Gables shooting case.

Danley, who lives at 1019 Tenth street northwest, was disturbed by the sound of violent quarreling on a nearby corner at Tenth and L streets northwest. Rushing into the street in a bathrobe, and gripping a revolver, Danley saw two men fighting over a woman, he said. The fight was being witnessed by three men in a car parked at the curb, Danley said.

Approaching the combatants, Danley threatened to put them under arrest. One, a dark-haired man, who has not been positively identified, but is said

PAIR, ENGAGED, FOUND FATALLY SHOT IN ROOM

Father, Peering In, Views Daughter and Fiance Lying Wounded.

SHOOTING IS SEEN AS MURDER, SUICIDE

Both Succumb Shortly After Without Gaining Consciousness.

MAN'S HAND HOLDS AUTOMATIC PISTOL

Both Well Known in Society Circles; Betrothal Was Broken Once.

Moorestown, N. J., June 2 (U.P.).—A romance of childhood which culminated in the engagement of a son and a daughter of two prominent New Jersey families ended tragically today with the deaths of Miss Ruth Wilson, 25, and her fiancee, Horace Roberts, jr., a few hours after they had been found fatally wounded in the girl's home here.

Both had been shot three times through the head. Roberts clutched a small caliber revolver in his right hand. Miss Wilson died shortly after the tragedy was discovered and Roberts died several hours later at Cooper Hospital, in Camden.

Police believe Roberts shot the girl and then turned the gun on himself, supporting the theory with the fact that the couple only recently had been reconciled after the girl broke their engagement two months ago.

Father Finds Couple.

The girl's father, John O. Wilson, Philadelphia and Camden financier, found the two when he returned home with his wife early today. He had forgotten his house key and, seeing a light in his daughter's room, he climbed up on the roof of the back porch and looked in the window.

The young woman, dressed in her night clothing, lay across the bed, wounded. At her side was Roberts, fully dressed, and also wounded.

Wilson hastened to a neighbor's house and called a physician. When the doctor arrived a short time later, Miss Wilson was near death and efforts to save her were futile.

The young man was rushed to a hospital, where it was hoped he could be revived to give an explanation of the tragedy. He died without regaining consciousness.

Murder, Suicide Seen.

Police who took charge of the investigation said the evidence pointed to the murder-suicide theory. Ellis H. Parker, Burlington County chief of detectives, conducted his own investigation and left town without making a formal statement, saying only that the case was closed so far as he was concerned.

Miss Wilson and Roberts were engaged about three months ago, friends of the two families said. It was never formally announced, however, and the girl broke the engagement a short time later while she was in Florida with her father. Roberts was stunned, his friends said, and several times asked the girl to renew the engagement.

In recent days they were seen together again and it was believed the formal

Roller-Coaster Dive Is Fatal to Youth

Drug Clerk, 21, Stands Up in Glen Echo Car and Is Thrown 40 Feet.

William J. Lawrence, 21-year-old drug clerk, of 2911 Thirteenth street northwest, was killed almost instantly last night when he stood up in a roller coaster car at Glen Echo, Md., and was thrown 40 feet to the ground as the car struck a curve.

In company with Clarence King and John E. Mahaffey, both of 809 Portland street southeast, Lawrence visited the amusement park early last night, and his companions were in the car with him when the tragedy occurred.

Justice of the Peace A. L. Moore and State Policeman Oscar Gaither, of Bethesda, conducted an investigation, and it is probable that an inquest will be held today. The youth's body was removed to the undertaking establishment of W. R. Pumphrey & Son, at Rockville, Md.

Lawrence was a native of Coraopolis, Pa., where his relatives are understood to reside, and he recently had been working as a clerk at the Central Drug Co., Twelfth and E streets northwest.

Faulty Parachute Cause Of Young Flier's Death

Detroit, June 2 (A.P.).—Imperfect packing of a parachute today caused Daniel Otterbacher, 22 years old, to fall 2,000 feet to his death after a leap from the wing of a plane.

Witnesses who inspected the parachute after the accident, said its fastenings were jammed so it was necessary to use a knife to open them

SURVIVORS PAY HONOR TO DEAD OF LOST CAUSE

19 Confederate Veterans Attend Ceremonies at Arlington.

FORMAL OPPOSITION IS WITHOUT EFFECT

Lincoln's Name Applauded as Southerners' Graves Are Decked With Blooms.

As the notes of a bugle sounding taps echoed through the Virginia Hills, a thin gray line of nineteen Confederate veterans moved with uncertain steps through the twilight yesterday from Arlington Cemetery, a little aged woman bringing up the rear, carrying the Stars and Bars that the old soldiers carried so proudly through the Civil War. Yesterday their hands were occupied with canes, many of them using two sticks to aid their feeble progress.

The brave little band had paid homage to their fallen comrades who sleep in the Confederate section of the National Cemetery, and had celebrated at the same time the birthday of Jefferson Davis, president of the lost cause.

They had come in a group, marching slowly and uncertainly behind the stalwart members of the United States Marine Band, playing the "Dead March," from Saul. They carried at the head of the little line the Stars and Stripes, and beside it, the Stars and Bars, bringing a start of tears from the several thousand Washingtonians and visitors who had joined with them to hold memorial for their dead.

They listened calmly to one of their number, Dr. Parke P. Flournoy, lieutenant commander of Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, in his invocation predict "the battle is soon over for us." He implored God to "make us understand that we are drawing near to you; make us all ready to lie down and rest and enter into Your presence soon."

Heflin Opposed as Speaker.

The exercises were marred by the absence of many of the members of District of Columbia U. D. C. chapters whose protest against the selection of Senator J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, as the speaker of the occasion was ignored. Heflin spoke despite the protest.

While leaders of the organization denied that there had been any concerted protest or that dissatisfaction over the selection of Heflin had been discussed openly at any meetings of the various chapters, they admitted a formal protest had been made to the members of the committee who selected the speaker and that many members had refused to contribute to the U. D. C. share in the expense of the exercises when the request that Heflin be replaced was ignored.

Mrs. George Alexander, president of the Children of the Confederacy, third vice president of the District division of the U. D. C., and a member of Jeb Stuart Chapter, and Mrs. W. E. Hutton, division registrar, and a member of the R. E. Lee Chapter, were two of the U. D. C. leaders who made formal protest and asked that another speaker be obtained. Calling on Gen. W. L. Wilkerson, brigade commander of the Confederate Veterans of the District, and John M. Follin, members of the committee to whom were delegated the task of selecting a speaker, Mrs. Alexander and Mrs. Hutton are said to have explained that the majority of the members of the U. D. C. were dissatisfied with the selection of the Alabama senator.

This protest did not bring the results desired and the members opposed to Heflin then decided to absent themselves from the exercises.

Reasons for Objection.

Neither Mrs. Alexander nor Mrs. Hutton attended, they said. Mrs. Lorena A. Hewett, acting president of the District of Columbia division of the U. D. C. in the absence of the president, Mrs. George B. Horning, who is in Europe, was out of the city. Miss Maude Howell Smith, treasurer of the organization, was present. A check by telephone last night revealed that other leaders either were absent from the city or did not attend the exercises.

The women's opposition to Heflin was based primarily on the tone of addresses he has made in recent years, the fact that he has been repudiated by the women of Alabama and his repeated affronts to newspaper men.

Senator Heflin in his address paid tribute to the living as well as the dead. He turned frequently to the little gray-clad group behind him and addressed his song of praise to them.

"It is always inspiring to gaze upon men who loved principle well enough to fight for it—to die for it," he said, addressing them.

The senator then reviewed the part the South had played in the birth

DEMOCRATS TO LAUNCH REORGANIZATION DRIVE AT GREAT DINNER HERE

Birthday List Honors George V's Physicians

All Who Attended Him in Recent Illness Get Recognition.

London, June 2 (A.P.).—The list of the king's birthday honors issued tonight includes all physicians who attended his majesty during his serious illness last winter. There are 5 new peers, 5 privy councillors, 11 baronets and 32 knights.

The first Baron Inchcape of Strathnaver, banker and industrialist, whose services to the kingdom have been many along these lines, is made an earl.

Literature was honored in bestowal of the Order of Merit on Robert Bridges, poet laureate since 1913, and John Galsworthy, novelist and playwright. A knighthood went to Ernest Gordon Craig, chairman of a talking moving picture company. Another knighthood was bestowed on Francis Wylie, secretary of the Rhodes trust for Oxford students.

Among a number of women honored were the Honorable Mary Pickford, a Conservative candidate defeated in the general elections, for public service, and Miss Elizabeth Gordon for her services in nursing the king during his long illness.

In addition to the privy councillorship bestowed on Lord Dawson of Penn, physician-in-ordinary to King George and the Prince of Wales, the honors to physicians who had attended his majesty included baronetcies to Sir Farquhar Buzzard and Sir Hugh Rigby and the Grand Cross of the Victorian Order to Sir Humphrey Rolleston. Sir Stanley Hewett becomes a knight commander of the Bath; Dr. Francis Shipway, the anaesthetist, is made a knight

BABY, 24 HOURS OLD, IS FOUND ABANDONED

Girl Discovered by Boy Scout in Vacant Lot; Child Will Live, Report.

POLICE SEEKING PARENTS

Heartlessly abandoned in a vacant lot at the junction of Nevada avenue, Broad Branch and Chapel roads northwest, a baby girl, less than 48 hours old, who was found in a cardboard hat box by a boy walking through the lot yesterday morning, is reported alive and doing well at Children's Hospital while police are pressing their inquiries to determine her identity.

Clyde Stevens, 13 years old, son of Mrs. Marion Stevens, of 3711 Huntington avenue northwest, is the central figure in the mystery surrounding the abandonment of the child, the unusual angle of the case being that a child so young lived through the ordeal of exposure on a night as cold as Saturday.

Stevens, a Boy Scout, spends most of his spare time in Rock Creek Park, which is only three blocks from his home, but on most occasions he rides his bicycle into the park. Yesterday morning, however, he decided to walk. Passing through the vacant lot at the junction of the three streets mentioned above, he heard a faint cry.

Clyde investigated. The noise was coming from the hat box, and on opening it he found a bundle of news-

COLLECTOR ROBBED OF $1,200 IN GARAGE

THIEF MAKES HIS ESCAPE

Held up at the point of a pistol as he was putting his automobile into a garage at the rear of his home, Samuel Kolker, 40 years old, of 1316 Buchanan street northwest, last night was robbed of between $1,200 and $1,300 by a colored man who forced him into the garage and then escaped through a dark alley.

Kolker, who is a commission salesman for Witt & Mirman, meat dealers of 211 Seventh street northwest, a short time before had completed a round of collections for his employers, and it was these receipts that constituted the thief's loot.

According to the account given police by Kolker, when he returned from his collection tour he and his wife and daughter took some visitors to their homes, and when they returned to their own home his wife and daughter alighted at the front entrance while he drove the car around to the garage in the rear.

As he opened the garage door, he said, a colored man stepped from the shadows and ordered him to put up his hands and walk into the garage. Kolker complied and was then told to hand over his money, which he did. The ban-

Smaller Paper Currency Release Set for July 10

Federal Reserve and National Bank Notes to Be Issued Up to $20; Present-Size Certificates to Be Distributed Also So as to Make Change Gradual.

New pocketbooks and wallets to fit the new small-size paper currency will be needed July 10, for Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has set that date for the first release of the new money.

The issue will be made through the Federal Reserve Banks and branches, and to commercial banking institutions of each Federal Reserve district there will be allotted limited amounts according to the size of the individual institutions.

Replacement of the old-size currency by the new will be a gradual process, according to Treasury Department officials; for old-size money, still fit for further circulation, will be issued along with the small-size bills.

First issues of the new money will include all kinds except national bank notes, and all denominations from $1 to $20. Small-size gold certificates and Federal Reserve notes in denominations above $20 will be issued at a later date. Small-size national bank notes will be printed and issued in order of character numbers beginning about July 15.

New designs used in the small-size currency will eliminate existing confusion regarding the denomination of bills and will furnish more effective protection against counterfeiting and fraudulent alterations. Designs have been simplified and there is a characteristic design for each denomination.

BANQUET IS TRIBUTE TO JOUETT SHOUSE

Leaders Will Honor Man in Charge of Local Headquarters.

POLICIES DISCUSSION WILL BE POSTPONED

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The great Democratic reorganization drive, recently announced by Chairman John J. Raskob, is to be launched at a national dinner here next Monday night.

At that time the plan of Raskob to build up a strong precinct, county and State machine throughout the country along the lines which made General Motors so successful, is to be given the big push amid a flow of oratory and rich food. Raskob is to make a speech, so is Jouett M. Shouse, who has been delegated by Raskob to do the work; Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, and Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic congressional committee.

The plan is to show the country that for a defeated party the Democrats eat just as regularly and are just as determined as the Republicans.

There are rumors that former Gov. Smith may be a surprise visitor but this is doubtful.

Nation to Hear Speeches.

The speeches are to be broadcast throughout the country over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The Local Jefferson Democratic Association is sponsoring the dinner, which is to be given at the Mayflower Hotel, but it is to be decidedly national in scope. Local sponsors include Col. Robert N. Harper, Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to Woodrow Wilson; Charles W. Darr, John F. Costello, District national committeeman; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, District national committeewoman; John B. Colpoys, chairman of the District central committee; former Representative Carlin, Ernest G. Walker, Charles A. Douglas and W. C. Valderston.

The national character of the dinner is attested by the fact that Breckenridge Long, former Assistant Secretary of State, is a member of the committee on arrangements.

According to the statement issued by the Democratic headquarters the dinner "will be the first gathering of nationally known and active Democrats since Mr. Shouse agreed to assume personal management of the permanent national headquarters of the party in Washington. Although arranged by the Democrats resident in the National Capital as a tribute to Mr. Shouse, the dinner is expected to prove the initial assertion of the active offensive by the Democratic party in the confidence of capturing control of Congress next year."

Policies to Come Later.

"The dinner," the statement continues, "will afford the first opportunity for the national leaders of the party to formulate their plans under the new organization which Mr. Shouse, as chairman of the executive committee of the national committee, is working out in Washington. Discussion at the dinner will be confined to organization program and methods rather than to party policies, being intended primarily as a tribute by Democrats to Mr. Shouse for his acceptance of the management of the permanent national headquarters in Washington."

was generally greeted as his contribution to a party that was in dire straits. As to what he plans to do when he has reorganized the defunct organization remains to be seen. It will be time then to determine whether, having rebuilt the party, he will seek to control it or whether it is his gift to men who went down the line at a great sacrifice for his friend, Alfred E. Smith. For the present the important fact is that he is out to give the Democrats an effective working machine. He has virtually succeeded in paying off the more than $1,500,000 deficit with which the party came out of the recent campaign.

Capitol Democrats Heartened.

The establishment of the headquarters here and the forthcoming dinner are such activities as the Democrats have not heretofore been accustomed. It bespeaks an unwonted militancy at this stage of the political season.

It is significant that coincident with the establishment of the headquarters here the Democrats on Capitol Hill tightened their ranks and began giving the Republicans a stubborn fight. It is not that Shouse or Raskob had anything to do with this, but their activities quite probably gave the Capitol Hill minority encouragement. Whether it was thus stimulated or not, it was about this time that it began to take heart—to take more interest in things.

Although the dinner comes on the heels of Bishop Cannon's call to anti-Smith Democrats in Virginia to organize and fight the regular organization candidates, there is no relation.

It is, however, such carryings-on as this by Raskob that give Cannon the peg on which to hang a fight. He cites such as this as evidence of his charge that Raskob is still the head of the party. But the Democrats by and large can not be expected to refuse to associate with their chairman just because the bishop objects, especially when this chairman is the livest wire that has appeared in some time in Democratic circles.

Two Robbers Slain By Police in Holdup

Wounded Officer Shoots Fleeing Bandit as He Leaps in Auto.

Wheeling, W. Va., June 2 (A.P.).—Two members of a negro bandit gang were shot and killed by police and one officer was wounded here early today after the robbers had held up one South Wheeling poolroom and were in the act of robbing another when police appeared. A third man was captured and a fourth escaped.

One negro was shot down as he started to draw his revolver when police entered the scene of the second holdup. The other three bandits fled toward the business section. One was captured and another shot Officer Otis Galentine in the leg when the policeman caught him at a street corner. The negro then leaped into a parked car in which two white women were sitting and there Galentine shot him dead.

The man captured gave his name as Ralph Parker, of Swissville, Pa. Jesse Williams, 30, and Lee White, 40, both of Detroit, were killed, and Charles Atchison, 24, Detroit, escaped.

Man Fails to Find Job; Kills Himself

Carpenter, in City Several Months, Ends Woes With Gas.

Failing to find employment in Washington, to which city he came several months ago from New York, William G. Bodenheimer, 43 years old, a carpenter, living at 431 G street northwest, yesterday decided to end his troubles by committing suicide.

Attracted to Bodenheimer's room by the odor of escaping gas, Lula Walker, a maid at the G street address, found Bodenheimer dead in bed, a victim of gas escaping from a small gas stove in his room. A note, stating that he was sorry to cause this trouble and explaining he had become despondent because of his inability to find work and because of ill health, was found near his body.

Police of the Sixth Precinct, who were summoned, notified Dr. J. Ramsay Nevitt, District Coroner, who issued a certificate of death by suicide. Bodenheimer's widow and other relatives, who live in New York City, were notified of the tragedy.

Jacqueline Logan Wed To Broker Second Time

Beverley Hills, Calif., June 2 (A.P.). Jacqueline Logan, film actress, and Larry Winston, broker, were married for the second time here today. A justice of the peace performed the ceremony, which was witnessed only by two friends of the couple.

Last August the couple were married at Agua Caliente, Mexico, but were obliged to remain separated by reason of Miss Logan's divorce from Ralph Gillespie not being final until last month.

Japanese Marines Leave Hankow.

Shanghai, June 2 (A.P.).—The Japanese marine garrison which has been guarding the Japanese concession at Hankow has been withdrawn and is proceeding to Shanghai. It is understood half of the garrison will remain here and the remainder proceed to Japan.

No Liquor on Pay Days.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, June 2 (A.P.). Announcement was made today that the sale of liquor on all banana plantations will be forbidden on pay days. The measure will diminish government revenues, but is expected to prevent disturbances of the peace.

ALTERATION OF DRY AMENDMENT URGED

BUSINESS MEN BACK LAW

Prohibition, expected to hold the attention of President Hoover's law enforcement commission for a longer time than any of its other problems, sprang to the forefront last night when its virtues and drawbacks were debated over the radio, a suggestion being made for a change in the eighteenth amendment. At the same time a statement was issued by 24 of the Nation's leading business men upholding the dry law.

The business leaders, including Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison, J. C. Penney and Capt. Robert Dollar, in a message to the American people announced their full support of President Hoover's prohibition policy. The sense of their message is included in the following paragraph from the message:

"We believe that prohibition should be given an honest trial, that it was enacted for the protection of the American home, and that the moral force of the country is behind President Hoover in his endeavor to combat those forces which are attempting to frustrate this effort."

Editor Offers Amendment.

While this statement was being brought to public attention through the press, William L. Chenery, editor of Collier's Weekly, in a speech over the National Broadcasting Co.'s system was urging an amendment to the eighteenth amendment which would put part of the controlling power in the hands of the States.

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"Congress shall have the power to regulate or prohibit the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof; but such grant of power shall not be construed to require that such regulation or prohibition shall be uniform throughout the United States nor deprive the States of power to impose additional regulations or prohibitions upon such manufacture, sale, transportation, importation and exportation."

Commenting on the present situation, Chenery declared that the fundamental point is that a majority of the people would tackle the problem in their own way whereas they are still ruled by "the dead hand of 1918" and by a measure passed in the stress of war.

McBride Lauds Prohibition.

During the same hour on the radio, F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Antisaloon League of America, declared that the prohibition amendment offers the best solution to the liquor problem proposed in all the history of the fight against the evils of strong drink.

McBride cited ten reasons for his belief, including statements that the people have indorsed the amendment, that it has made prohibition uniform, that it insures prosperity, that it prevents rather than cures the evil, and that it took the Government out of the hands of the liquor business.

Still another suggestion on prohibition came from Justice Franklin Chase Hoyt, of New York, winner of a contest conducted by William Randolph Hearst for the best temperance plan. He would allow the eighteenth amendment to stand but by means of judicial action restrict it to cover only distilled spirits, thus leaving beers, wines and other light drinks beyond the scope of the law.

18 Injured as Bomb Wrecks Buildings

Three Are Seriously Hurt in Blast at Dickson City, Pa.; Fuel Blamed.

Scranton, Pa., June 2 (A.P.).—Three persons were seriously injured and 15 others suffered cuts and bruises late last night by a terrific explosion that wrecked the Sterling Market, a two-story grocery store and meat store at Dickson City, near here.

The most seriously hurt were Joseph Sabatelli, of Old Forge, proprietor of the Sterling Market; Frank Krotoski, barber, Dickson City, and Edward Kobostsvi, Dickson City. All were taken to the Mid-Valley Hospital.

The Sterling Market, a two-story stucco structure, was leveled, parts of the building landing two blocks away. The home of Chief of Police Morris, which adjoins the market, and another large house were wrecked by the blast and then swept by fire. Glass was showered everywhere along Main street when windows in a score of buildings were shattered. The blast was heard 5 miles away. Police estimated the property damage at $50,000.

GIRL'S BROKEN NECK IS PUZZLE TO POLICE

WAS WELLESLEY ALUMNA

Detroit, June 2 (A.P.).—Arms still folded rigidly but peacefully across her breast in the position in which she was found, the body of Miss Mary Haydis Lee, 27 years old, former school teacher and daughter of reputedly wealthy parents in New York City, today was the greatest stumbling block in the path of police investigating her death in a hotel room here yesterday.

The difficulty arose through the apparently paradoxical position of the young woman's body when found and disclosures of a subsequent post mortem examination.

A maid discovered the girl's death when she entered the room to clean. So normally disposed was the body that the maid several times retreated after looking into the room, believing Miss Lee asleep. Her hands were folded lightly over her breast and a near-smile rested on her lips. The bed was unruffled, with sheets still tucked in around the sides.

When she finally approached and discovered Miss Lee was dead, the maid summoned hotel officials, who called police. A police surgeon, after cursory examination, declared death due to heart disease and the body was removed to the county morgue.

There, however, another examination disclosed bruises on the neck and face and closer examination showed a broken neck with a traumatic hemorrhage, which indicated the fracture occurred before death.

Miss Lee registered at the hotel May 19, and at that time gave her address as Columbus, Ohio. She came here with a crew of magazine solicitors, all of whom registered at the sme hotel. Fellow employes said she did not appear for work yesterday, but they believed her asleep.

Miss Lee was a graduate of Wellesley College. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Lee, Baldwin, Long Island.

BODY OF HODGSON BOY IS RECOVERED

FATHER ALREADY BURIED

The body of William Hodgson, 10 years old, of the Valley Vista Apartments, 2032 Belmont road northwest, who on May 19 was drowned with his father, Carey V. Hodgson, noted geodetic engineer, while canoeing in Chesapeake Bay near their summer home at Bay Ridge, Md., yesterday was recovered on a beach across the Severn River from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, according to word received here last night.

The body, which was badly decomposed, was discovered by Charles Perry, a seaman attached to the high-powered naval radio station nearby, while strolling along the beach. Authorities expressed the opinion that it probably had been washed ashore a week ago.

Although the body of the lad's father was picked up four days after the drowning by a tramp steamer crew 25 miles from the spot where the son was found, the body of the boy was found within a mile of where the overturning of the canoe is believed to have occurred.

When Hodgson and his son were first reported missing two weeks ago, following a squall on the bay, all available air and water craft at the Naval Academy was pressed into scouting service, but without avail.

The Hodgson boy's body will be returned here today and funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock at Arlington. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Edith Hockett Hodgson. His father was buried May 25 with military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

Polish Fliers Test Ship For Hop Over Atlantic

Milan, Italy, June 2 (A.P.).—Final tests to the motors of the Caproni plane in which the Polish aviators, Adamkowalczyk and Klisz, hope to fly from Milan to Dublin and thence to Chicago, are being made. The four motors were started running yesterday and will be kept going until Tuesday at 2,000 revolutions per minute. The aviators believe they will be ready to take off at the end of this week.

Priests Prepare to Return As Mexico Lifts Exile Bar

Archbishops and Bishops to Go Back from U. S. After Two Years of Banishment As Result of Church Truce Conference of Ruiz and Gil.

Mexico City, June 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—All Catholic archbishops and bishops from Mexico banished two years ago when they refused to obey the stringent regulations of the Calles government may return home immediately. It is expected that they will all be back by July 1, in time to celebrate the impending ratification of the new agreement between church and state with high masses.

President Portes Gil has ordered the Mexican consuls in other lands to visa the passports of the church dignitaries. Of the 28 members of the episcopate 21 went into exile in April, 1927.

The understanding reached by Archbishop Ruiz and President Gil has already been informally accepted by the government and the Vatican. When this agreement is ratified, the returning prelates will instruct the priesthood to resume church services in their diocese. Thus masses, which have recently been held only surreptitiously in Mexico, will once more be celebrated throughout the land.

Catholics in Mexico City received word today that Archbishop Ruiz will arrive here later in the week from Washington. Archbishop Francisco Uranda y Saenz of Morelos crossed the border yesterday, the first member of the hierarchy to return from banishment.

A great reception will be given to him upon his arrival in Cuernavaga, the second oldest diocese in Mexico. This will be the first of fervent demonstrations to greet the returning prelates.

Three archbishops—those of Guadalajara, Durango and Oaxaca—and four bishops took to the hills when their confreres were exiled for refusing to concentrate in Mexico City and report daily so that the secret service could keep them constantly under supervision.

A price was at one time set on the head of one of the fugitives, Archbishop Francisco Orozoco y Jiminez, but federal troops were never able to capture him. Bishop Miguel de la Mora, who became acting head of the hierarchy within Mexico, hid among friends in this city and its suburbs, emerging from time to time to help attain a church-state agreement.

Foreign correspondents who wished to interview him were obliged to pledge not to reveal the secret meeting place. The correspondents went to the rendezvous one by one so as not to excite the attention of the authorities. The bishop seemed to enjoy the secrecy and welcomed the opportunities to exchange views with foreigners.

Archbishop Orozoco, however, was always inaccessible. The story went that only three persons ever knew where he was. Gen. Jaquin Amaro, the war minister, about a year and a half ago took the field in person to capture this distinguished Latin scholar and philosopher dead or alive.

The general was close on the trail several times, but always villagers, loyal to the church, sped ahead of the pursuit and gave the archbishop warning.

Of the 4,000 Mexican priests, more than 2,500 have left the country within the past two years. The majority went to live in the United States. Archbishop Ruiz, whose triumphant return as apostolic delegate—the first Mexican ever accorded this distinction—is expected within a few days, made his home first in San Antonio and then in Washington. Archbishop Jose Mora y Del Rio, titular head of the Mexican church, died an exile in San Antonio.

No services will be held in the churches until the peace pact is actualy signed. Masses ceased to be celebrated in Mexican churches July 31, 1926. However, in many private homes and chapels, including those of some government officials, services were held secretly. Similarly, priests have continued under cover to baptize infants, perform marriages and administer the sacrament to the dying.

RECESS SET TODAY BY SUPREME COURT

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court of the United States is to recess today for the summer with its docket almost clear for the first time in recent years.

A winter of hard work for Chief Justice Taft and his eight associates has brought its reward, and as the end of the term approaches the nine members of the Nation's highest tribunal find that for once they have almost caught up with the steadily increasing volume of cases demanding their attention.

They have heard all cases ready for argument at this term and are carrying over to next term only about 140 or 150 cases, of which approximately 50 are petitions for review which reached the court too late for action at this term, owing to the time allowed the opposition to file briefs. At the conclusion of the last term the number had been reduced to 190.

No Falling Off of Cases.

The court has succeeded in catching up with its work with no material falling off in the number of cases filed. Up to date it has at the present term disposed of 789 cases, with one more opinion day to substantially increase the number, while at the entire last term it disposed of 859 cases.

The court has before it awaiting decision 37 cases, of which 23 can be disposed of by 19 opinions, the remaining being petitions for review.

Among the cases awaiting decision, in which the opinion may be handed down today, is the contempt case against Harry F. Sinclair and others for jury shadowing. Sinclair, now serving a sentence for contempt of the Senate, would be required to serve six months additional should the highest tribunal affirm the decision of the trial court, and would be joined by Harry M. Day for four months and by William J. Burns for 15 days, all of the sentences being imposed in the jury shadowing case.

Waiting Cases Listed.

More important among the other cases in which the Supreme Court today may render opinions is one from Texas involving the right of negroes to use the emblems and insignia of white Shriners; two from New England, questioning Government taxes imposed on money advanced to pay another's Federal income tax; two from California attacking the validity of the State's motor fuel tax and its tax on certain motor carriers; two from Ohio opposing the proposed abandonment by the State of a part of the Miami and Erie Canal; one from Nebraska, testing the power of States to require railroads to eliminate grade crossings on farms; the old controversy over rates charges by the Santa Fe and other railroads on grain for export at gulf ports, and an effort by the Baltimore & Ohio and other Eastern railroads to recover transfer charges on westbound freight, crossing the Mississippi at St. Louis, which the Supreme Court held should be borne by the West Side lines.

While the number of opinions at the present term will be less than at the previous term, some were of exceptional importance. The O'Fallon decision, in which the court held, 5 to 3, that the Interstate Commerce Commission had failed to give proper consideration to the cost of reproduction in valuing the road's property for rate-making and other purposes, probably presents the greatest potentialities.

Water Diversion Awaits.

Other important decisions included rulings in the diversion of water from Lake Michigan at Chicago; the right of women pacifists to naturalization; the definition of the word "business" in the immigration laws to mean "intercourse of a commercial character," thus keeping out foreigners who sought to enter to work without complying with the quota restrictions; the removal of the last obstacle to give effect to the packers' consent decree restricting their activities to the meat packers industry; the setting aside of the 7-cent fare in the Interborough case from New York City; the opening up of the dispute over valuable oil lands in the Elk Hills naval reserve, claimed by the Standard Oil Co. of California, and approval of the sentence imposed on Harry F. Sinclair for contempt of the Senate and of the arrest of Sheriff Thomas W. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, to be brought before the Senate for further questioning in the investigation into the election of William S. Vare as senator from Pennsylvania.

The court decided a number of important cases affecting the rights of States in various matters, and has already advanced for early hearing at the term beginning in October a number of others.

Plane Strikes Wire; Pilot, Passenger Unhurt

Lawton, Okla., June 2 (U.P.).—A Minnesota pilot and his passenger escaped death late yesterday when their airplane crashed into a 33,000 volt power line while making a forced landing.

The plane was thrown 150 feet, landing on its back. Neither Oss Karms, the pilot, nor C. R. Powell, Walters, Okla., the passenger, was injured. One wing of the plane was burned by the contact. The accident occurred near Hastings, Okla.

CONVICTIONS FEWER; DRY CASES INCREASE

Department of Justice Figures Reveal Trends in Prohibition Enforcement.

TOTAL OF FINES SHRINKS

Statistics compiled by the Department of Justice and made public yesterday show an increase in the number of prohibition cases instituted the last six months of 1928 over those started in the corresponding period of 1927, the figures being 27,575 and 26,677 and decreases in convictions and pleas, 23,683 compared with 26,277, and fines assessed $3,222,146 against $4,444,751.

In the District of Columbia, although more cases were instituted in the last six months of 1928 than in the same period of 1927, there were fewer convictions and pleas. Fines, however, were doubled. The figures for the last six months of 1928 show 344 cases instituted, and 381 convictions and pleas and fines totaling $70,160. In 1927 there were 155 cases instituted, 441 convictions and pleas and fines of $35,748.

Maryland showed 809 cases instituted in the last six months of 1928 against 487 in the same period of 1927; 519 convictions and pleas against 737, and fines of $65,977 against $76,599.

Virginia had 207 cases instituted in the last six months of 1928 against 297 in the same period of 1927; 180 convictions and pleas against 221, and fines of $14,375 against $10,750.

Decreases and Increases.

An analysis of the table issued yesterday by the department reveals that the following districts have shown a steady decrease for several years in almost all the recorded facts listed: Alaska, first and second divisions; California, Southern; Colorado, North Carolina, Western; Tennessee, Middle. There has been a steady increase in cases instituted, convictions and pleas and fines assessed in Connecticut, Georgia, middle; Hawaii, Illinois, Northern, and Illinois Eastern.

The following districts show a decrease in all features of the table compared with the preceding year: Alabama, Northern; Delaware, Georgia, Southern; Indiana, Iowa, Northern; Louisiana, Western; Mississippi, Southern; Missouri, Eastern; Nebraska, Nevada, Oklahoma, Northern; Utah, West Virginia, Northern and Southern.

The only States that show an increase in the last six months of 1928 over the last six months of 1927 for cases instituted, convictions and pleas, and fines assessed, are: Arkansas, Eastern and Western; California, Northern; Kentucky, Eastern and Western; Pennsylvania, Eastern, Middle and Western; South Carolina, Eastern, and Wisconsin, Eastern.

Total of Sentences Fails.

For the last six months of 1928 and 1927, New York started cases as follows: Northern, 1,328 against 657; Southern, 4,205 against 4,769; Eastern, 1,053 against 1,150, and Western, 513 against 316.

The convictions and pleas in New York were: Northern District, 1928, 666, and in 1927, 973; Southern, 3,882 and 4,134; Eastern, 945 and 1,436, and Western, 249 and 228.

The fines in New York for the 1928 and 1927 periods were: Northern District, $186,947 and $200,495; Southern, $222,582 and $108,447; Eastern, $62,087 and $130,143, and Western, $30,340 and $28,650.

In connection with these statistics there are compiled figures showing the aggregate number of years of imprisonment imposed for violation of the prohibition law during the six months period of the year, which shows a gain in the period of 1928 compared with the months of 1927. The total number of years, omitting fractions of a year, for the six months of 1928, in all the districts throughout the country, was 3,205 years. During the 1927 period the total number of years, omitting fractions of years, was 3,472. In the six months of 1926 the record was 2,363 years, and in the six months of 1925, 2,467.

Senators Learn Debating From Holton Arms Girls

Affirmative Team Wins Tilt on Query That Armed America Is Surety of World Peace; Student Reads Prize Thesis; School Play Is Presented.

Four United States Senators took lessons in debating yesterday from members of the senior class at Holton-Arms School. They are Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, whose daughter was one of the debators; Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Senator William H. McMasters, of South Dakota, and Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina.

The debate was on the subject: "Resolved, that the United States, adequately armed, is the surest guarantee of world peace." The verdict of the judges gave the affirmative side the decision.

The debators were: For the affirmative, the Misses Nina Harrison Randall, Frances Evans Staley and Katherine Barkeley; for the negative, the Misses Dora Innis White, Jane O'Neil Wallis, Elizabeth Breckenridge and Betty Beale.

Miss Eleanor Morgan Crain, who wrote the thesis winning the highest honors in this year's commencement, chose as her subject "Rupert Brooke Dies," and she read it before the audience at yesterday's ceremonies. Honorable mention was given to four other graduates who wrote theses, they being Catherine Knox Berry, Frances Breadon, Jane Crockett Gilman and Ruth Reilly.

"The Torch," dramatic club of the school, presented a three-act comedy, "The Romantic Young Lady," at the Wardman Park Theater Saturday night to a crowded auditorium. The dramatic society has been giving its plays three evenings every year since 1922.

KIDNAPED DRUGGIST DESCRIBES TORTURE

CUT AND BURNED BY BAND

Chicago, June 2 (A.P.).—A story of five days of torture at the hands of hoodlums, who mistook him for another and sought to wring information from him regarding a still of which he knew nothing, was told to police today by Matthew Zimmerman, druggist, reported kidnaped from a Chicago street last Tuesday.

Staggering into his home, Zimmerman told of being thrown out of a car at Hammond, Ind., yesterday after having been held captive since Tuesday night by a group of men, armed with guns, who forced him into an automobile on the northwest side of Chicago.

"When they seized me, I thought I was going to be robbed," Zimmerman related. "Instead, they blindfolded me and we drove a long distance. I could tell we went through Whiting and Gary.

"Finally we came to a small wooden shack and got out, the men abusing me and calling me 'Matt Daly.' They cursed me and told me to tell where 'that distillery' was. Of course I couldn't, and when I protested I was not Daly it just brought more abuse.

"Every day it was some new torture. Saturday they stripped me. 'Now Daly, you ——, tell us!' they ordered. When I couldn't they took jagged pieces of glass and cut me about the chest and abdomen."

Zimmerman displayed the results of the cutting and also displayed burns and bruises all over his body.

"When they finished cutting me with glass, they began burning me with cigarettes," Zimmerman continued. "I pleaded with them to kill me and end the torture. Finally, Saturday night, a clean-cut, nice looking chap came in and saw me. He swore at the men and berated them, saying they had the wrong man. So they cursed me again, blindfolded me, drove me away in their car and dumped me out, telling me I was lucky to be alive."

Zimmerman said he was hurled from the car near a bridge and narrowly missed going into the river. He tried to walk but collapsed and was picked up by passers-by. His captors were Italians, he said.

Police are investigating.

MORE CRIMES LAID TO MACON WOMAN

Police Hint Charge of Murder in Insurance Case Will Be Augmented.

ARSON THEORY IS SIFTED

Macon, Ga., June 2 (A.P.).—Detectives cooperating with insurance company operatives today announced that evidence of crimes other than murder would be presented against Mrs. J. C. Powers, Macon's "insuring landlady," when the grand jury meets Tuesday.

Although declining to amplify, the detective bureau intimated that charges more serious than arson or fraud would be outlined for the grand jury, which was called into special session by Solicitor General Charles H. Garrett, of Bibb County.

Charged With Murder.

Mrs. Powers, 71 years old, and her roomer, Earl Manchester, 21, are in jail charged with the murder of the latter's room mate, James Parks, 25, a printer. Manchester has signed a confession that he killed Parks for $1,000. He said Mrs. Powers promised him the money when and if she collected a $14,000 insurance policy she held on Park's life.

The landlady confessed and then repudiated her admission, Sheriff J. R. Hicks, jr., announced the day after her arrest last week. Parks was slain Monday night last, and the body found Tuesday morning. The woman and roomer were arrested Wednesday.

Acts Held to Cover 15 Years.

Detectives and insurance operatives today said they had evidence that Mrs. Powers had been "preying on insurance companies for about fifteen years."

Burning of houses belonging to her, the death of Sam Wright, an overseer on her Jones County farm, in 1914, and the death of a negro, all were under investigation. The negro's and the overseer's lives were insured in Mrs. Powers' name, as were the houses.

The disappearance of another man, whose life Mrs. Powers insured, and the death of the agent who wrote the insurance also was investigated.

The automobile had swung into Massachusetts avenue to assist the fugitive. Danley's shot went wild as the man jumped onto the running board of the car which was traveling without lights. Meanwhile the other man had fled.

William Francis Curtain, 24 years old, and Joseph Daniel Curtain, 23 years old, brothers, of 401 Decatur street northwest, who are said to have witnessed the affray, were arrested and held at the Second Precinct station on a technical charge of investigation.

DRY AGENTS' TRIAL FOR MURDER NEARS

MOUNTAIN TOWN EXCITED

Special to The Washington Post.

Abingdon, Va., June 2.—A tense community tonight awaited the opening here tomorrow of the trial of three dry-law enforcement officers for the killing of J. W. Hendricks, 20-year-old student of Emory and Henry College. The three agents—J. D. McReynolds, J. W. Worley and James Crowe—will face indictments charging first degree murder when Judge A. C. Buchanan, of the Circuit Court of Tazewell County, opens court in the Washington County courthouse tomorrow morning.

The high feeling which has pervaded this little Cumberland hill town since the night the college student was killed, was intensified today as grim, silent men from the back mountains of Virginia drifted into Abingdon for "court day." By twos and threes the mountain men came in from the "forks" and "branches" of the Cumberlands, many of them listed in the tale of jurymen, from which will be drawn the twelve men who will decide the fate of the three enforcement officers.

None of the three has been seen in Abingdon since the day after the midnight shooting which caused the death of young Kendrick. The college boy, with two companions, Sterling Duton and Paul Phelps, was driving through Abingdon on his way to his home at Meadow View, 7 miles away. The three officers, patrolling the roads about midnight, called upon the driver to halt the car. Phelps and Duton declare that they believed the officers were robbers and speeded on. The three policemen gave chase and all fired at the speeding automobile. They say they fired at the tires, but one bullet struck Kendrick in the back of the head. He died in a hospital the next morning.

Indignation stirred Abingdon to its depths after the killing and a well-to-do uncle of the dead youth, who was an orphan, has declared he would devote his entire fortune to the prosecution of the killers.

Despite widespread agitation, which reached even to the governor's mansion at Richmond, the three men are still technically in office, although they disappeared from Abingdon immediately after Kendrick's death, and took refuge with friends "in the mountains." They had not returned tonight.

Commonwealth Attorney Fred C. Parks, whose representations before the grand jury resulted in the indictment of the trio, said tonight that he would oppose any effort by defense to delay trial.

VETERAN SERGEANT IS DEAD

Rites Tomorrow Planned for Joseph Foley, Five-Enlistment Man.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning with repulem mass at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, for Sergt. Joseph F. Foley, retired, 527 Irving street northwest, who died at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday afternoon after a short illness. Following services at the church at 8:30 o'clock there will be a short service at Arlington National Cemetery.

Sergt. Foley served five enlistments in the Army and served two years overseas during the World War. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Florence Foley, of the Irving street address.

PHILADELPHIA GANG GUNS KILL 2, HURT 3

ANOTHER DIES IN BATTLE

Philadelphia, June 2 (A.P.).—Gangsters' guns brought death to two persons here today, while another was critically wounded and two others slightly injured. Two of the victims apparently were mistaken by their assailants as rival gangsters.

Harry Hewitt, 54, who was riding with his son-in-law and family, was instantly killed tonight when an automobile filled with gangsters turned a machine gun on his car. His son-in-law, Harry J. Rodenbaugh, 24, has six bullets in his body and is not expected to live. Two women and a child in the same car, escaped unhurt.

Police believe the gangsters mistook Rodenbaugh's car for that of one of their rivals.

William "Bill" Scheer, whom the authorities said was a racketeer, also was shot to death. His body, with three bullet wounds in the head, was found in an exclusive residential section of Germantown. It is believed he was killed early in the day when rival gangsters engaged in a battle at Eighth and Race streets. Two pedestrians were wounded in the crossfire during this battle.

Hoboken, N. J., June 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Thomas Bartoni, 22, of Hoboken, was "taken for a ride" early today by five gangsters and thrown out on a lonely road near Carlstadt, N. J., with five bullets in his legs. Bartoni is in the Hackensack Hospital, where a blood transfusion was required to save his life.

Bartoni gave Lieut. Dawson, of the Hoboken Police Department, names of five men he said plotted his death because he was considered in disfavor.

engagement soon would be announced. Saturday they motored to Ocean City, N. J., with John Collins and a young woman whose identity has not been learned. They spent the day there and drove back again in the evening.

Police Advance Theory.

One police theory is that Roberts left the girl at her home and returned later with a gun, gaining entrance to the home by climbing up to her window. Police believe he shot her as she lay in bed, climbed into the room and then shot himself. They support this theory by the fact that the room was found in complete order, and that there were no signs of a struggle.

In searching for a motive for the murder-suicide theory, authorities said they could not tell whether Roberts considered his suit hopeless or whether he was jealous of another suitor.

Miss Wilson and Roberts attended the same school here and became attached to each other, friends said. Roberts' father is one of the most extensive landowners in this part of New Jersey, and the Roberts home is one of the show places of Moorestown. Both families were pioneers of this region.

1 Killed, 3 Injured In Student Crash

Ithaca, N. Y., June 2 (A.P.).—Thomas K. Humble, 19, of Los Angeles, Calif., Cornell freshman, was killed today and three other Cornell students were injured when their machine overturned on the Cortland road at Forest Home as they attempted to avoid a collision with a parked car.

Those injured are James D. Robinson, of New Orleans, La., owner and driver of the roadster; Ralph T. Keithley, Denver, Colo., and G. S. Powell, Glen Ridge, N. J. They were not seriously hurt.

Six students were riding in the roadster. The lights of an approaching car blinded Robinson, who did not see a machine parked beside the road until too late to pass it safely. He swung his car sharply and it bounded off the road and overturned in a ditch. Humble, who was riding in the rumble seat, suffered a broken neck. The three other students escaped injury.

Lindbergh's Presence In South Georgia Denied

Sapelo Island, Ga., June 2 (A.P.).—Overseers on the Sapelo Island estate of Howard Coffin, financier, today said Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were not honeymooning on Sapelo or any other of the south Georgia island group, as far as they knew.

St. Peter's Basilica Glows Under Light From Torches

Rome, June 2 (U.P.).—The majestic basilica of St. Peter's, etched against the night by 5,000 glowing lanterns and 2,500 flaming torches, attracted great throngs tonight to witness a spectacle offered to the public only twice before since 1870.

The basilica was illuminated in honor of the solemn beatification of Don Giovanni Bosco, founder of the Salesian Order. The only other times it has been so lighted were during the holy year of 1925.

As dusk came on, the slow-moving crowds formed a series of human streams meandering towards the great Square of St. Peter's.

The view of St. Peter's illuminated at night is one of extraordinary beauty, and thousands of pilgrims in the capital considered this evening's event the culminating experience of their visit to Rome.

The sound of a bell gave the signal for the "sanpietrini," as the workmen of St. Peter's are called, to begin the work of lighting the almost endless file of lanterns.

The workmen clung like so many ants to almost inaccessible portions of the facade, crawling and clambering to the out-of-the-way lights. When the illumination was complete a lace work of golden fire seemed to envelop the great church.

At a quarter to nine torches were lit and placed around the cupola of the basilica, flaring picturesquely in the slight evening breeze.

The crowd gathered in the square before St. Peter's broke into resounding applause as the illumination attained maximum splendor. The glow was visible for 20 miles in the Roman campagna.

The beatification of Don Giovanni Bosco took place at St. Peters this morning, being the first of a series of beatifications scheduled for this year.

The fame of the new saint attracted a great crowd of pilgrims, the greatest number coming from Piedmont, where Don Bosco was born. Salesian fathers from South American states, China, the Belgian Congo and Australia also were present.

The square was swarming with people at an early hour. A 30-foot tapestry depicting Don Bosco ascending to heaven was hung from "The Balcony of Benedictions" in the facade. The tapestry was unveiled at the moment of reading of the formula of beatification. Don Tomassetti, general of the Salesians, asked permission for the reading, which was done by the secretary to the Vatican chapter of the order. After the reading before the assembled cardinals, a solemn te deum was sung.

Pope Pius entered St. Peters in the afternoon to venerate the new saint. His arrival in the crowded basilica where the diplomatic corps and a large crowd was assembled was heralded by a shrill blast of silver trumpets. The college of cardinals preceded him.

in an attempt to "straighten out her reputation," Miss Shaw said.

The girl's body, with a bullet through her heart, was found several days ago in the marshes near Hebron, and was identified last night by Johnson. His accusation of Mrs. Cassler followed. Standing over the girl's body in a Hebron undertaker's parlors, Johnson cried:

"It's Camie. I know—Mrs. Kassler killed you!"

Mrs. Cassler, brought to the scene by police from Chicago, supposedly for identification purposes, heard the accusation. She met the charge with cold and calm denials.

"No," she said, "we were friends."

"But isn't it true that you beat Miss Soutor?" police asked her.

She laughed.

"Oh, yes, but we patched that up. I haven't a jealous hair in my head."

Police said that pending a coroner's investigation Monday, they would hold Mrs. Cassler, her husband, her 19-year-old son, Edward, Miss Shaw and Johnson.

Johnson seemed to know that the girl found in the swamp was Miss Souter before she was identified, police said, and he telephoned police his suspicions. He also, police said, seemed to know the way to Hebron and directed them there while denying he had ever been in the neighborhood.

4 Women, 3 Men Held After House Is Raided

Four women and three men were arrested early yesterday morning when police raided the house at 1407 W street northwest, the home of the women.

Dorothy Palmer, 24 years old, and Diane Peters, 26 years old, were charged with conducting a disorderly house. Barry Wilbur Pierce, 19-year-old marine, and Rose Travis, 24 years old, were booked on a statutory charge. Margaret Jean Allan, 22 years old, was charged with vagrancy, while George Thompson, 23 years old, of 327 Fourteenth street southeast, and Harold Frank Detwiler, 27 years old, of 1307 Clifton street northwest, were charged with disorderly conduct. All posted bonds of varying amounts.

Boy's Arm Broken in Fall.

Jack Wood, 7 years old, 25 Randolph place northwest, suffered a broken right arm yesterday afternoon when he was playing with a cat on the rear porch of his home and fell from the porch. He was treated at Sibley Hospital.

KING GEORGE QUIET ON EVE OF BIRTHDAY

Salute of 21 Guns to Be Only Celebration in Honor of 64th Anniversary.

DOCTORS ARE CONFIDENT

Windsor, England, June 2 (U.P.).—King George passed a quiet day, and there was no change in his condition tonight on the eve of his sixty-fourth birthday.

The king will observe his birthday tomorrow in bed, but his physicians have expressed confidence that his majesty's improvement would continue. The usual ceremonies will not be observed and the king will not participate in any birthday festivities. Only the customary salute of 21 guns will be fired from the broadwalk, a short distance from the king's room.

Only a few members of the royal family are expected to be at Windsor Castle tomorrow, as the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York will participate in ceremonies at London.

Band Plays Beneath Window.

The Guards' Band played on the terrace beneath the king's window this afternoon. A large number of tourists visited the castle grounds.

Lord Dawson of Penn, who returned hurriedly last week after the king had suffered a setback in his recovery from last winter's long illness, and Sir Stanley Hewett motored here from London this morning. They visited the king at Windsor Castle and remained for two hours.

They left shortly after luncheon.

As during the months of his serious illness, his majesty has been a cheerful patient during the present setback. He was believed almost recovered from the pleurisy and complications of his former illness when he caught cold last week and was forced to return to bed.

Abscess Is Draining.

The new abscess which formed under the old operation scar on his right side is draining satisfactorily and the king continues to use the hospital bed which enables him to be moved about the sick chamber. The bed has a special mattress and is on rubber-tired wheels, so that it may be moved easily.

It was said the king had been doing more than his weakened condition could stand, despite the rapid recovery he made at Craigwell House, Bognor, before coming here. The formation of an abscess, however, has often been known to occur again after a lapse of months, or sometimes years, from the original illness.

The royal family has remained within easy reach of Windsor Castle over the week-end, but its programs have not been changed. The Duke and Duchess of York visited at the Castle yesterday.

previously had explained that Creatorex fell into the water when one of his companions playfully capsized the canoe while diving.

The youngster, who was said by his parents to have been unable to swim, sank without a cry and rose to the surface only once again before disappearing. His companions refused to divulge any details of the tragedy to newspaper men, however.

H. B. Emmons and Frank Smart, 19-year-old youths camping on the south side of the river, heard the shouts of the terrified boys and speeded to the rocks in an outboard motor boat. They searched a few moments unsuccessfully and then hastened to Key Bridge to inform River Policeman Charles M. Birkett and Capt. Will Reynolds, a veteran Potomac boatman, who summoned harbor police.

Harbor police participating in the search included Acting Lieut. L. H. Russell, and Privates Adams, J. W. Mealon, R. C. Ault and Theodore Crowell.

papers, and on unwrapping these he found the baby, minus all clothing.

Young Stevens ran to the nearest house, where police were notified and an ambulance called. The baby was removed to Children's Hospital where it was treated by Dr. E. M. Chickering of the hospital staff. While the little girl had suffered some from the exposure, Dr. Chickering ventured the opinion that the baby was not seriously affected and would probably survive.

Police of the Fourteenth Precinct who made an investigation were unable to find any clews to the identity of the baby. The box in which the child was found bore the label of a Washington store, but there was nothing further to disclose the identity of the parents.

Doctors who examined the baby said it was not more than 24 hours old when found.

COOPERATION SOUGHT AS ELECTION RESULT

British Press Visions Closer Relations of Parties for Constructive Laws.

MACDONALD WINS FAVOR

London, June 2 (U.P.).—Distinct benefits to Great Britain may result from the general election last week which raised the Labor party to a position of greatest strength in Parliament, but failed to give the laborites a majority over the Conservatives and Liberals.

The British press, after a week-end of reflection on the political stalemate and after learning that Ramsay MacDonald, Labor leader, intends to be the next Prime Minister, commented today on the strong possibility of greater cooperation in the House of Commons in the future.

The hope of a more adequately representative House of Commons which will achieve definite accomplishments is not at all visionary, according to political observers, but it depends in great part on the results of party conferences in the next ten days.

MacDonald's Stand Analyzed.

MacDonald's statement Saturday that, if made Premier, he will do his utmost to insure against another general election for at least two years, gave the nation some hope for fulfillment of the Labor leader's announced desire for "quiet development of industry and of confidence both at home and abroad."

While present indications are that MacDonald will not be able to continue in power for two years without a majority in Parliament, it is pointed out that the new House of Commons will not be dominated by any single party, and the members will be forced to devote greater energy to the various domestic and foreign problems.

It is interesting to observe that three newspapers—one Labor, one Conservative and one Liberal—each urged political leaders today to prevent another general election in the immediate future. The newspapers also pointed out that the present split of political strength in the Commons will permit the parties to adopt a policy of cooperation which will aid the country.

Liberal Influence Decried.

Other newspapers, however, were divided on the situation, some expressing the opinion that the stalemate, which gives David Lloyd George's Liberal party the balance of power would create a dangerous situation.

There also was general speculation as to the possible Labor cabinet, as a result of a statement at Labor party headquarters saying that it is "assumed there will be a Labor government; there can not be any alternative."

The Sunday Observer said it was reported Lord D'Abernon, former Ambassador to Berlin, who is credited with initiating the suggestion which resulted in the Dawes reparations conference, would be MacDonald's first choice for foreign secretary.

Speculations on Appointments.

The Sunday Express said the foreign office post might go to J. H. Thomas, railwaymen's leader, or Arthur Henderson. The newspaper added that Commander J. M. Kenworthy might be named secretary of state for India, and Lord Sankey, a famous judge, lord chancellor.

Sir Oswald Moseley, one of the "young intellectual" types of Labor men, was mentioned as an outside possibility for foreign minister by some newspapers. It is doubtful whether any effort will be made to give him any but an undersecretaryship, however.

Henderson was home secretary in the last Labor government. Thomas was dominion and colonial minister. Both won praise for their work in office.

Kenworthy is a former Liberal and a former naval officer. He is heir to his father's barony of Strabolgi, and some day must go to the House of Lords as a peer. Lord Sankey made a name for himself as a judge of Liberal ideas.

Other Cabinet Speculations.

Lord Thompson was mentioned to head the air ministry; Capt. Wedgewood Benn was proposed as the next first lord of the admiralty; Philip Snowden, former Labor chancellor of the exchequer, would be expected to return to that post, and Miss Margueret Bondfield was mentioned as minister of health. If she were named she would be the first woman cabinet member in British history.

Latest estimates of the popular vote were Conservatives, 8,570,164; Labor, 8,338,893; Liberals, 5,371,446; others, 287,869.

The Daily Express will say tomorrow that it understands David Lloyd George's Liberal party will not support Premier Stanley Baldwin if a vote of confidence in the Conservative government is taken when Parliament reconvenes.

Lloyd George meets the Liberal party leaders Tuesday and it is expected they will decide to advise the party members, who hold the balance of power in the next House of Commons, to act accordingly, the newspaper will say.

Five Dead in Third Argentine Quake

Death Toll Jumps to 52 as Cold Wave Intensifies Suffering.

Mendoza, Argentina, June 2 (U.P.).—Another earthquake—the third in less than a week—shook this region this afternoon, killing at least five persons and raising the death toll for the week to 52.

Four persons were killed in the town of Las Malvinas and one at Villa Autel, which was left in ruins by the first shocks.

Increased suffering was reported at Villa Autel and San Rafael, due to the intense cold.

Carlos Borzani, the Federal intervention, again visited the Villa Autel region and ordered more relief supplies distributed. He reported a scarcity of tents and food for the homeless and injured.

Many residents of Mendoza and the neighboring areas spent tonight in the open air. It was the third night outdoors for many of them and there were campfires on all sides.

The rescue work in the ruins of the villages damaged or destroyed by the quake continued as rapidly as possible.

Jackie Coogan Rallies Following Operation

Glendale, Calif., June 2 (U.P.).—Jackie Coogan, boy film actor, was reported progressing "excellently" tonight after an operation for acute appendicitis.

Jackie was taken ill in his Hollywood home early today and was rushed to the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital here. While enroute home from New York two weeks ago the 13-year-old actor suffered a similar attack, according to his physician, Dr. H. F. Westphal.

LABORITES LIKELY TO TAKE POWER IN ENGLAND

VETERANS DECORATE LOST CAUSE GRAVES

of our Nation from Patrick Henry, a Southerner, sounding the note for liberty, to George Washington, another Southerner, becoming the first President.

"You noble men," Senator Heflin continued, addressing the little company of veterans, "made a record of valor that shall last until time shall fold his weary wings and lay his scepter down. The principles for which you fought have helped the Government every day.

"The Confederacy fell but it put an emphasis on States' rights and local self government which will live always. It is best that we are together."

Senator Heflin passed on to the Spanish-American and the World Wars, commenting eloquently on how Confederate veterans' sons and grandsons had fought side by side with their brothers of the North. He paid tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson for his leadership and for withdrawing without spoils after the war was won.

Lincoln's Name Applauded.

"The assassination of Mr. Lincoln, who was born in the South, in Kentucky, the birth State of our beloved Jefferson Davis, was the saddest blow the South suffered," Heflin continued, interrupted by applause from the Southerners.

"I believe had he lived he would have loved these sections back together, certainly he would have saved the South from the ordeals suffered in reconstruction."

Commenting upon their valor, Senator Heflin turned from the veterans and addressing the large gathering, he said in ringing voice, "This country will be preserved by individual courage. What are we doing to meet our duty?

"There are six major foundations we must defend. One of these is religious freedom; another, keep the church separate from the State; another, free speech; another, peaceful assembly; another, an untrammeled free press, and another, the little red schoolhouse."

He spoke of what he termed "insidious efforts" to overthrow these foundations and urged preventive measures.

"The time to treat disease is before you get it; the time to prevent the break in the levee is to stop the leak as soon as it is discovered.

"Let us all have allegiance to that flag, and that flag only," he said, taking the folds of an American Flag beside the speaker's stand into his hand.

"I rejoice in the doctrines of Mr. Hoover in trying to keep down war as much as possible, but if there is war, the South is always ready to follow that flag."

Graves Covered by Blooms.

Heflin said that the South must lead in preserving Americanism, because it is not touched by socialism and commercialism. "A Southerner won't swallow his convictions for a dime."

"I believe the time will come when the perpetuity of this country will rest with the South where the American stock is purest and unsullied by foreign blood and socialism," he added.

Turning again to the little band of veterans, Senator Heflin said in conclusion:

"You met your duty in youth, you fought for principles that will live forever, and now yours is a deathless youth."

The services were opened by the sounding of "Assembly" by a bugler of the Marine Band. "Onward, Christian Soldier" was sung by the assemblage to the accompaniment of the band, followed by "America."

Dr. Flournoy then delivered his invocation, followed by "How Firm a Foundation," sung by a double quartet and the audience.

Gen. W. L. Wilkerson, brigadier commander of the District of Columbia Confederate Veterans, introduced Senator Heflin.

"Abide With Me," "The Star-Spangled Banner," "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Dixie" were rendered by the band and quartet.

The Rev. John E. Briggs, of the Fifth Baptist Church, pronounced benediction and said prayers at the monument, where the quartet sang "Cover Them Over With Beautiful Flowers," as Daughters of the Confederacy covered every grave with flowers.

Taps concluded the service.

MRS. SAMUEL G. JONES DEAD

Wife of Army Colonel Formerly Was Washington Resident.

Word was received by Washington relatives yesterday of the death in San Francisco, Calif., Saturday of Mrs. Samuel G. Jones, wife of Col. Samuel G. Jones, adjutant general of the Ninth Corps Area, U. S. A., after an illness of several months. Following funeral services in San Francisco today, Col. Jones will accompany his wife's body to Washington and she will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Powell Clayton, former United States Mrs. Jones, eldest daughter of Gen. Ambassador to Mexico, was prominent in Army circles for many years and spent a number of years in Washington when her parents lived in this city. She was a sister of Baroness Moncheur and Lady Arthur Grant Duff and of the late Maj. Powell Clayton, U. S. A.

Judge H. Goldfogle Dies Suddenly at 73

Former Representative, of New York, Succumbs in Hotel There.

New York, June 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Judge Henry M. Goldfogle, president of the board of taxes and assessments and for many years a member of Congress, dropped dead yesterday morning in his apartment in the Hotel Imperial. He was 73 years old, having been born May 23, 1856.

As a representative in Congress for an East Side district of Manhattan, he became a national figure, serving on some of the most important committees of the lower house. He was active in Tammany Hall politics and in Jewish social and philanthropic work.

Judge Goldfogle was born in New York City and never married. He attended New York City public schools and Townsend College, which he described in the Congressional Directory as a business college. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1877, practicing law continuously until the time of his death and acting as counsel in some of the most noted civil suits of his day.

He was made a justice in the Fifth District court in 1887 and in 1888 and became a judge in the municipal court of New York until 1900, when he resumed the private practice of law. He was a delegate to the Democratic national convention in Chicago in 1892 and 1896 and was sent to Congress as a Democrat in the Fifty-seventh and six succeeding Congresses. Defeated for reelection to the Sixty-fourth and Sixty-fifth Congresses, he was sent back again to the Sixty-sixth Congress, but was defeated for reelection in 1920.

Bryant Washburn Hurt In Los Angeles Crash

Hollywood, June 2 (U.P.).—Bryant Washburn, former idol of the screen, and his wife were injured early today in an automobile collision.

William D. Dills, driver of a speeding touring car which struck the Washburns' coupe at a Hollywood boulevard intersection, was arrested on a charge of suspicion of driving while drunk. Mrs. Washburn suffered severe injuries to both legs. Washburn and Dills were cut about the head. The Washburns returned to their home after receiving hospital treatment.

Two Drowned in Bulgaria.

Sofia, Bulgaria, June 2 (A.P.).—Two children were reported drowned in floods following heavy rains at Razgrade, in northern Bulgaria. The water stood 7 feet deep in sections of the town and did great property damage.

EDWARD HENDERSON DIES AT RIVER CAMP

Hecht's Collection Manager Succumbs to Attack of Heart Disease.

WAS LONGEST IN SERVICE

Edward F. Henderson, collection manager of the Hecht Co., died suddenly yesterday of heart disease at his summer camp on the Potomac River. He was the oldest employe in the company in point of service, having been with the concern for 33 years.

Apparently in good health yesterday morning, Mr. Henderson and his son, Dr. C. Edward Henderson, went to his summer camp on the Potomac River above Key Bridge, where they were engaged in putting the camp in readiness for the summer season. Dr. Henderson returned to the city about noon, leaving his father at the camp. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon the elder Henderson was suddenly taken ill and fell unconscious. James F. Casey and Gerald Lawlor, who were at a neighboring camp, went to his assistance and took him across the river to the home of H. L. Troup, where the Emergency Hospital ambulance was summoned. Dr. I. Rutkoski, of Emergency Hospital, pronounced him dead.

Mr. Henderson was born in King George County, Va., 61 years ago. When a young man he came to Washington, where he has been a resident for 40 years. His home was at the Sherman Apartments.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Jennie W. Henderson, by two daughters, Mrs. Bert Hicks, of Hampton, Va., and Mrs. Lesta Conrad and two sons, Dr. Henderson and Stanley Henderson.

Funeral services will be held at Hines' Chapel, Wednesday morning at 10:30, and interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

DIPLOMAS MISSING IN UNIVERSITY ROW

4 TRUSTEES DISAPPEAR

Des Moines, Iowa, June 2 (A.P.).—Requisites for graduation of 60 seniors from Des Moines University were lacking today as commencement activities started with the baccalaureate service.

Not only had Dr. T. T. Shields and three other trustees, who must authorize issuance of the diplomas, been missing since yesterday afternoon, but the diplomas themselves had been taken from the home of George Newcom, University business manager.

Newcom today said he had found no trace of the sheepskins, which had been brought to his residence by the printer yesterday. An unidentified man, saying he wanted to take them to the university, asked for and received them from Mrs. Newcom, he said.

When attorneys for the missing trustees last week failed to obtain a dismissal in the District Court of a temporary injunction under which the school had been operating since May 13, the trustees said diplomas would not be issued until the student riots of May 11 had been investigated. During the riots the trustees were attacked with stones and eggs.

It was learned that the four trustees, Dr. Shields, Miss Edith Rebman, E. A. Roberts and O. W. Van Osdel, rented an automobile yesterday, paid a deposit and apparently left the city. Earlier in the day Dr. Shields was reported to have received a threatening letter on stationery of the local post of the Ku Klux Klan.

Last night a fiery cross was burned on the campus, but failed to attract a crowd.

President H. C. Wayman gave the baccalaureate sermon this morning in the university chapel, with deans assisting in the program. The trustees promised they would not interfere in commencement activities except possibly to withhold diplomas from students involved in the recent rioting.

Grinnell, Iowa, June 2 (U.P.).—Dr. T. T. Shields, chairman of the board of trustees of Des Moines University, refused today to comment on the disappearance of diplomas and degrees which prevented his departure from Des Moines Saturday.

He said, however, that he would not sign degrees until he had investigated the student riot, in which bricks and eggs were thrown through windows of the university, in protest to the dismissal of President H. C. Wayman and the faculty of the school.

Dr. Shields, who, with his secretary, Edith Rebman, and another member of the board, left Des Moines following receipt of a threatening letter from the Ku Klux Klan, said he would return to the university but declined to give any definite date.

Oil Imports Curb Will Be Proposed

Independent Producers to Ask Limitation at the Colorado Parley.

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 2 (A.P.). Limitation of oil importation into the United States from foreign countries by enactment of a tariff provision or by direct law of Congress will be the proposal of the independent oil producers of the United States at the Oil Conservation Conference here June 10, William H. Gray, Tulsa, Okla., said today.

Mr. Gray, president of the National Association of Independent Oil Producers, arrived here to open headquarters for his organization pending the opening of the conference, called by the United States Department of the Interior at the instance of President Hoover.

Mexico City, June 2 (A.P.)—Dispatches from Acapulco, Pacific Coast port in the State of Guerrero, today said a strong gale had damaged a number of buildings and paralyzed traffic. Trees and telephone poles were blown down.

Air Conquerors of Ocean To Honor Fliers Who Fell

(Associated Press.)

Paying tribute to others who tried but failed to perform the feat that brought them fame, Amelia Earhart, Bert Acosta and Clarence Chamberlain, transatlantic fliers, are to lead an air parade over the Statue of Liberty tomorrow in a memorial service arranged by the National Broadcasting Co.

The announcement yesterday said a group of about 20 planes will take off from Roosevelt Field at 3:30 p. m., fly out beyond the coastline, and at a given signal shut off their motors while a minister and priest, carried in one of the planes, read a brief memorial service.

Chamberlain will drop a floral piece in the shape of a monoplane, and others will release smaller wreaths.

ANNAPOLIS JAMMED WITH JUNE VISITORS

MIDSHIPMEN DRIVE AUTOS

Annapolis, Md., June 2.—June week in Annapolis will reach its peak beginning tomorrow. Both the Naval Academy and St. John's College are conducting their pregraduation ceremonies and thousands of visitors are crowded into every available room in the hotels and private residences. Others are offering fabulous prices for facilities, the price ranging as high as $125 for four days.

Today Capt. Sydney K. Evans, Chaplain Corps of the Navy, who will soon leave here after distinguished service, delivered his address to the graduating class. Students of St. John's this afternoon packed the college chapel to hear the baccalaureate sermon to the graduates.

Tomorrow's program at the academy will consist of lengthy regimental drill morning and afternoon and band concerts afternoon and night. The midshipmen have nearly full liberty and the first class is allowed to drive automobiles. Most of the middies' girls seem to have automobiles and one of the city patrolmen reported that he personally had noted midshipmen driving cars bearing license plates of 29 different States.

St. John's tomorrow will celebrate its alumni luncheon at noon, followed by a lacrosse game between the college team, national champions, and the alumni. In the evening a banquet will be held in honor of the student team and later the June ball will be held in the college gymnasium.

St. John's seniors will be given their diplomas Wednesday and if possible under the historic liberty tree on the front campus, where the Indians and white men held treaties in the early days. The midshipmen's graduation will be held Thursday morning.

When Mother Was The Power In the Home

There Was No Electric Refrigerator

THERE was a time when Mother carried in her own ice. Answering the iceman's shout, she went with her tin pan to the wagon at the curb, where she got a 10c or 15c piece, depending on the heat of the day.

What a difference a few years have made in refrigeration. Electricity now automatically maintains a constant cold which preserves the full flavor of meats, keeps butter firm and vegetables crisp. Ice cubes for beverages and dainty frozen desserts may be prepared at will.

Automatic Electric Refrigeration is but one of the many services electricity performs in the modern home — cooking, washing, ironing, and many other household tasks are performed quickly and easily at the snap of a switch.

New Low Energy Rate

To permit a greater enjoyment of the convenience of electricity, the Associated System has introduced, in the areas served, new rates consisting of a low energy charge and a moderate fixed charge.

FARM BILL PASSAGE SOUGHT THIS WEEK

Leaders Believe Debenture Provision Can Be Eliminated on Reconsideration.

SENATE GROUP MAY YIELD

(Associated Press.)

Enactment of farm relief legislation this week is the goal of congressional leaders who believe the controversial exoprt debenture provision of the Senate measure can be eliminated on reconsideration.

With wheat selling below the dollar a bushel mark, the lowest in sixteen years, all interest at the Capitol is centered on the farm problem. Blame for this condition is being passed freely around. The debenture group, which had a bare majority in the Senate, asserts the condition justifies such a provision. The administration supporters opposed to debenture, contend the effort for this proposition must me abandoned in the interests of speedy enactment of a farm measure acceptable to the President.

The conferees of the Senate and House are expected to reach an agreement during the week on their long-standing controversy over farm relief and there are indications that the Senate group will yield on the debenture in the interests of an agreement, thus forcing the issue again before the Senate.

Vacation plans of administration leaders are still centered on the all-summer recess, but this discussion has been laid aside to await the final disposition of the farm measure. While the Senate is waiting for the report of the House-Senate conference, it will be taking up another administration proposal for the extra session repeal of the national origins immigration quota basis.

Reed Anti-Repeal Leader.

The resolution of Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, to carry out the recommendation of President Hoover for repeal of the national origins provision of the immigration law will come up as soon as the Senate disposes of the pending bill of Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, to license commission merchants dealing in perishable products. A vote on the Borah bill tomorrow or Tuesday is in prospect.

Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, is in charge of those favoring the national origins provision and he believes he has the votes to prevent repeal. The new quota basis, providing greater restricton and drastcally changing some of the immigration quotas, goes into effect July 1.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, is keeping an eye on the farm relief situation and is prepared to force it to the immediate attention of the Senate, once the conferees report. Senator McNary (Republican), Oregon, the chairman of the conferees, is driving ahead with a view to reaching an agreement on the conflicting agriculture measure by Tuesday or Wednesday.

Once the farm bill is enacted, attention will be given to a recess. The Senate finance committee will begin consideration of the House tariff bill next week, but Chairman Smoot says it is going to require about two months work in committee to get the measure ready for the Senate.

All-Summer Recess Plan.

As a consequence Senator Watson is looking ahead to an all-summer recess if an agreement is forthcoming to assume final disposition of the tariff before the regular session of Congress begins in December. Whether that agreement can be obtained is still doubtful, and in its absence a lay-off of only a month or six weeks will be sanctioned by the administration.

The House is expected to send the census-reapportionment measure to conference tomorrow or Tuesday. Leaders there have indicated they will not accept the provision in the Senate bill placing the 100,000 census workers under civil service and are asking for a conference. This bill, also on the Hoover program, is expected to become law before the proposed recess starts, and the end of the week should see it very near the statute books.

The Senate probably will be asked during the week to decide whether the proposed inquiry into labor conditions in the textile industry shall be made by the Senate or by the Federal Trade Commission and the Tariff Commission. The manufactures committee, by a vote of 6 to 5, went on record for the Trade Commission inquiry, but Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, the author of the resolution for a Senate investigation, is going to force a vote on this in the Senate.

Catholic Women Conduct Service

Bishop Shahan Presides at Sodality Union Shrine Ceremony.

Marked by simplicity and solemnity, the twenty-third semiannual demonstration in honor of Our Blessed Mother was held yesterday afternon at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception by the Sodality Union, largest organization of Catholic women in the world. The work of the Sodality Union is chiefly in the rural schools of the archdiocese. Demonstrations honoring Our Blessed Mother are held in the spring and autumn seasons each year.

The Right Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, D. D., presided at the ceremony, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. John F. O'Hurley, of Gonzaga College. Bishop Shahan pronounced a pontifical benediction over the audience of 1,200 who gathered at the shrine.

The Rev. William M. McGuire was deacon for the service and the Rev. William Hauer was subdeacon. Deacons of honor were the Rev. V. Vincent Fitzgerald and the Rev. James C. Murphy. The Rev. James H. O'Hara was master of ceremonies.

Woman on Way to Jail Winds Up in Hospital

An intended journey to jail turned out to be one to the hospital early yesterday morning for Frances Styles, colored, 34 years old, 2219 Alabama avenue southwest when Policeman E. L. Baker, of the Second Precinct, after arresting the woman on a charge of disorderly conduct, found that she was suffering from an infected wound in the back of the head which she told the officer she had received more than a week ago.

Baker had placed the woman in a wagon when he saw the wound. He had told the driver to go to the precinct, but changed this order to Freedman's hospital. The woman remained in the hospital. Her condition was reported to be undetermined.

Bombay Stock Exchange Suspends.

London, Monday, June 3 (A.P.).—The Express today says all business on the Bombay Stock Exchange has been suspended by the directors in the interest of investors and to prevent a panic. The prolonged strike in the cotton mills has affected the market disastrously, and recent bear raids have caused a heavy fall in speculative shares that has hit the investing public hard.

Machado Will Help U. S. Suppress Rum Smuggling

Starting His Second Term, Cuban President Tells of Aspirations,

Havana, Cuba, June 2 (U.P.).—President Gerardo Machado, of Cuba, declares his purpose of cooperating fully with the United States in suppressing the liquor smuggling traffic from his country to the United States as he takes up the reins of government for his second six-year term.

Cuba will carry out her part of the liquor smuggling treaty, though with the full knowledge that it constitutes a sacrifice to important economic interests, the president said in an exclusive interview with the United Press in which he also discussed other common interests of the two republics.

The illegal liquor traffic between Cuba and the United States, which was formerly a serious problem, has been reduced materially by the treaty covering liquor and dope smuggling signed during the Coolidge administration to which Machado referred.

The Cuban president did not discuss the tariff particularly, now a pressing problem between the two countries because of the proposed increased duty on sugar and proposed tariffs on tomatoes, avocados and other Cuban products, but in answering inquiries regarding the basic economic policies that should govern relations between the United States and Cuba, he explained that "just and equitable" treatment would be of the highest advantage to both countries. This was a veiled reference to the delicate tariff problem.

The United Press submitted four inquiries to the Cuban president. That referring to prohibition was as follows:

"From observation of previous and present national experiments aimed at reducing popular consumption of alcoholic beverages, what in your opinion is the rational policy for a government to pursue in dealing with this problem?"

Alcohol Important Product.

Machado replied:

"Cuba, happily, is not faced with the problem of popular consumption of alcoholic beverages, but she warmly applauds any steps which may contribute to decreasing such consumption until it finally is completely extinguished. This point of view as to public morality, and a real desire to cooperate with the United States in every good work, as proof of the loyal and frank friendship which we profess, induced us to sign with the United States the treaty for the suppression of the smuggling of alcoholic beverages and of noxious drugs. The provisions of this treaty are being carefully observed, with the full knowledge that there are being sacrificed to that friendship, in reality, important interests of Cuban industries, for it is well known that alcohol, the basis of spirituous beverages and especially of our rum, is, with the sole exception of sugar, the most important product of the cane cultivated so extensively in this country."

The questions submitted to ascertain the president's views regarding the future economic relations between the two countries were:

1. What basic economic policy should govern United States-Cuban relations that both countries may derive the most mutual benefits?

2. How would such a policy benefit Cuba and how would it benefit the United States?

Would Maintain Reciprocity.

In answering the first, Machado said that American intervention to protect Cuba and the many acts of friendship since that time "seem to me sufficient answer in themselves, in the case of a loyal country like Cuba, to this question, and to give assurance, with no reservation whatsoever, that the basic economic policy which will continue to direct the relations between this republic and the United States will be that of the strictest reciprocity and that of the highest esteem."

GERARDO MACHADO.

In answer to the second, the president said that "just and equitable treatment, one of cordial reciprocity, such as that indicated, must be, without doubt, of the highest advantage to the two countries so closely connected by natural ties, by history and by culture."

The United States, he added, would win "results of great importance and of inestimable value through the sympathy with which the whole world" would regard its treatment of a small country.

Because of the present economic depression in Cuba while the Cuban government at the same time is carrying out an extensive program of public works involving the expenditure of more than $60,000,000, which includes construction of a new capitol costing approximately $16,700,000, the United Press asked President Machado a fourth question

Proud of Debt Record.

4. What will be the policy of the new administration regarding reduction of the public debt and the meeting of further demands for capital to carry to fruition the extensive public works program now under way and projected?

The president answered that the program would be carried forward with the "same scrupulous care" as heretofore.

"It is a fundamental principle of our constitution that no obligation shall be contracted without at the same time providing for the income necessary for its payment, and the law of the Cuban Congress which approved our great plan of public works provided, at the same time for this constitutional requirement, fixing the taxes necessary for carrying it out, with such happy results that the receipts set aside for this purpose have exceeded our hopes and the budgets previously estimated for this purpose.

"As to our public debt, it should not be forgotten that each one of our loans, and the treaties through which they have been contracted, have carefully set forth the terms for their amortization, and I take the greatest pride in declaring that during my first term as president these obligations have been most zealously complied with, and in stating now that in this period which is beginning we are not going to depart in the slightest degree from this honest, as well as honorable, policy."

Decorations Given Two Heroes of War

C. L. Edell Awarded D. S. M. and C. J. Trevail Gets Silver Star.

The War Department last night announced the award of the distinguished service cross to Christopher L. Edell, formerly corporal, Company D, 303d Engineers, 78th Division. At the time of his enlistment Corpl. Edell resided in Paterson, N. J. The award was made for extraordinary heroism in action near Thiaucourt, France, September 30, 1918.

"With utter disregard for his own personal safety and in the face of intense enemy shell fire," says the citation, Corpl. Edell voluntarily crossed 'No Man's Land' during a heavy enemy barrage and brought back three members of his command who were wounded and helpless in front of the trenches, thereby saving the lives of those men and setting an example of soldierly courage and determination to the members of his organization."

The silver star was awarded to Charles J. Trevail, formerly second lieutenant, 130th Infantry, 33d Division, for gallantry in action at Bussy, France, on the night of November 3-4, 1918. Lieut. Trevail led a raiding party of 50 men in an attack on the enemy's position at Bussy, during which they killed thirteen of the enemy and brought back valuable information regarding the enemy's troops. Lieut. Trevail is a native of Brooklyn.

Woman Loses Life As 2 Dams Break

Wall of Water in Wyoming Sweeps Southward Into Colorado.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 2 (A.P.).—A wall of water released when two large dams at the Hereford ranch, 6 miles east of Cheyenne, gave way early this morning, claimed the life of one woman, destroyed bridges in its path and threatened valuable herds of live stock as the flood swept into Northern Colorado.

The dam break was caused by the impounding of flood waters following a violent hail and rain storm. The reservoir was filled to overflowing from the sudden torrents that poured in from all sides.

The approach to every bridge across the creek into Cheyenne with the exception of that on the Lincoln Highway was washed out and hundreds of motorists were marooned at the edge of the city. Two cabin camps were inundated and several of the cabins washed down the creek. All occupants reached high ground safely. Police and firemen with boats rescued scores of persons from houses in west and south Cheyenne in which water stood several feet deep.

Air Firm Moves Terminal.

Mexico City, June 2 (A.P.).—It was learned from reliable sources today that the Mexican Aviation Co. was moving its terminal from Brownsville to some point in the interior of Texas. W. L. Morrison, traffic manager, who will fly to Brownsville tomorrow, said the company had no statement to make now, but would make an announcement on June 12. He will return here on Wednesday.

Old Constitution Praised at Mass

Archbishop Fumasoni Biondi and Italian Envoy at Special Service.

The commemoration of the first constitution of modern Italy, the statute of Charles Alberto, of Savoy, of 1848, at the Church of the Holy Rosary, took place yesterday at solemn high mass, celebrated by the pastor. The Most Rev. Archbishop Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, apostolic delegate, sang a pontifical te deum of thanksgiving at the close of the mass.

The Italian Ambassador, Senator di Martino, was present, attended by his staff. The sermon, delivered by Msgr. Leo P. Manzetti, of Baltimore, dealt with the significance of the recently concluded agreement between the Vatican State and the Kingdom of Italy, emphasizing the fact that the long-delayed recognition by the Italian State of the sovereign independence of the Holy See settled a situation which had been more of an obstacle to the civil power than to the church.

The reception to the distinguished visitors to the parish, including "The Star-Spangled Banner," Italian Royal March and Pontifical March by the boys' band of the church, was given under auspices of the Italian Catholic and C. Colombo Societies of the parish, which embraces Italian-speaking Catholics in the District.

Unions Urged to Form World Labor Federation

(United Press.)

A world federation of trade unions is proposed by Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, in an editorial in the current issue of the American Photo Engraver. He urges international organization "As a means of freeing permantly the entire western hemisphere from European influence and a means of bringing world labor together without disturbing national tendencies and philosophies."

Pointing to the Elizabethton, Tenn., situation, where he asserts, "American troops have been doing guard duty over plants largely owned abroad," Woll declares that "world unity of labor has become more imperative as organizations of capital have become more and more involved in international relations."

The proposal is put forward at this time, he explains, so that labor movements of all nations may consider it before the next convention, in Havana in January.

Heart Disease Is Increasing

Many people think of the heart as a mysterious organ, and feel that they are helpless in trying to prevent Heart Disease. But Heart Disease usually has a beginning outside of the heart—very often the first damage to the heart can be traced to poisons left in the body by diseased or overworked kidneys. Healthy kidneys, therefore, are necessary for the protection of the heart. Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Ark., gives natural aid to the kidneys and tends to keep them healthy and active. Physicians everywhere prescribe it. "Ask your doctor." SOUTHWEST FLOODS LEAVE MUD IN WAKE

12 Drownings Toll of Swollen Rivers; Several Rescues Are Recounted.

HOUSES FOUND DAMAGED

Kansas City, June 2 (U.P.).—Residents of Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas were pulling themselves out of mud bogs tonight as the temperature fell and rivers generally receded.

Twelve drownings in the Southwest during the past week were attributed to flood conditions. Property damage ran into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Storm clouds emptied as much as 3 inches of rain in 24 hours in parts of Kansas and Nebraska. Kansas City was beaten by a violent downpour throughout Friday night and Saturday. Near Houston, Tex., freshets in bayous boomed through streets, taking small bridges out and battering debris against streamside buildings.

Many cattle and chickens were drowned in Nebraska, roads were converted into waterways and farms suffered. A Missouri Pacific locomotive was nearly submerged in a lowland near Falls City. The engineer and fireman were found clinging to the branches of a tree. Many rescues of motorists were made along the course of the flooding Nemaha River.

At Houston and Beaumont, Tex., tonight the foundations of many buildings had emerged from the falling water, coated with yellow mud and, in many cases, weakened dangerously.

Convening Shriners Invade Los Angeles

Trains of Singing Masons Given Roaring Welcome by Earlier Arrivals.

Los Angeles, June 2 (A.P.).—Train after train of singing, carefree Shriners, whose gayety was outdone only by the roaring welcome earlier arrivals gave them, rolled into Los Angeles today bearing the main body of Masonry's funmakers to the fifty-fifth annual convention opening here Tuesday.

One of the most ambitious plans of the convention will be proposed by Freeland Kendrick, former mayor of Philadelphia and vice chairman of the Shrine hospital committee. Kendrick will ask for the expenditure of $800,000 annually for the establishment of hospitals for crippled children at Pittsburgh, Pa., Richmond, Va., and another in western New York.

At present, the Shrine expends $1,250,000 in the major charity of caring for crippled children in hospitals established throughout the country.

The appearance of the Arabia Temple train from Houston, Tex., carrying Imperial Potentate Frank C. Jones, was the signal for a thundering outburst, and the wondering thousands of sidewalk spectators tasted a bit of the famed Shrine mirth.

HOPING FOR LIMITATION.

The country strongly supports President Hoover in his effort to bring about reduction of naval armaments. It concurs with him in the opinion that naval defense needs are relative, and that if all the great navies were reduced equitably the defensive strength of each country would be as effective as it is now. A heavy burden would be lifted from the taxpayers, and the fear of aggression would be largely dissipated. The elimination of fear and suspicion would remove one of the most dangerous causes of war.

The British Labor party's gains in last week's election may make Ramsay MacDonald Prime Minister of England. His peace professions are taken at par value in many quarters. During the campaign he laid great stress upon the necessity of a better understanding with the United States. He favors an agreement on the freedom of the seas and has promised to work for naval limitation. Therefore the prospect that he will direct British policy is hailed by optimists as a sign that Mr. Hoover's efforts to bring about naval reduction will soon bear fruit.

If the situation could be reduced to such simplicity as to enable Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald to reach a gentleman's agreement leading to the mutual reduction of the world's two greatest fleets the world would be delighted. But there are too many complicating factors in the situation to warrant undiluted optimism. In the first place, Mr. MacDonald will have a very uncertain lease of power, and he will have in his cabinet men who are determined to revise the British debt agreement with the United States. Secondly, Mr. MacDonald's yearning for naval reduction would be more convincing if he had not, while prime minister, approved the construction of big cruisers which helped to make the British fleet stronger than the American fleet and forced President Coolidge to call the unfortunate Geneva conference at which the British delegates blocked the proposal for naval equality. Mr. MacDonald was unable or unwilling to withstand the pressure of the British admiralty, which is determined to maintain naval supremacy at all cost. Since Mr. MacDonald can not hold power except with the consent of some of these elements, his personal wishes may not prevail against established British policy.

Another naval limitation conference resulting in failure would do great damage to Anglo-American relations. It would be far better to await the conference of 1931, which must be held in any event, than to call a conference without a preliminary understanding that will insure its success. The popular pressure for naval limitation should not be permitted to hasten the governments into an unprepared conference.

Mr. Stimson has called attention to the heavy cost of warships. His statement doubtless is intended for foreign rather than American consumption, inasmuch as the cruisers now under construction will not bring the United States Navy up to equality with the British navy. The high cost of naval construction means nothing to America, but it may mean much to other countries, and if Mr. Stimson's reminder should help to persuade them that naval rivalry with the United States is a hopeless and ruinous policy, so much the better. The President is authorized by law to suspend construction of the new cruisers in the event of an international agreement to limit naval armaments. This should be a strong inducement to Great Britain to agree to genuine equality of naval strength.

The determination of the American people to maintain a navy as strong as that of Great Britain is fixed. They are willing that both navies should be smaller, but they will not accept a condition of inferiority. They remember the aggressions against neutral American commerce in past wars, and they bear in mind the military obligations of the nations belonging to the League of Nations. The ability of the United States to protect its commerce against any aggressor is a necessity, in the absence of an international agreement which would guarantee the safety of neutral commerce in time of war. Thus far the fixed British policy has been to deny the immunity of neutral commerce. A change in that policy would be more revolutionary than an agreement establishing the equality of the British and American navies. It is easier to make the fleets equal, and it is safer for the United States to do so, than to postpone equality in the hope of reaching an agreement guaranteeing the freeddm of the seas.

As matters stand the United States will continue the increase of its Navy up to a standard equal to British naval strength. In 1931 the naval powers must confer on the fundamental question of battleships. Whether the United States Navy is thereafter to become overwhelmingly stronger than any other navy will depend upon the willingness of Great Britain to agree to actual equality of naval power.

CANNON FOR GOVERNOR?

A decade ago Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, was a power in Virginia politics. Subsequently he went into the mission field and it was not until the recent presidential campaign that he again became a political power. He led the anti-Smith group in Virginia, going so far as not only to speak against Al Smith, but openly advocating the support of the Republican nominee. It was largely as a result of his effort that the Republican victory in Virginia became a Democratic rout. His bitter attacks upon the Democratic nominee played an important part in stirring up bad feeling during the campaign. Now Bishop Cannon seeks to perpetuate the feud. In a statement issued on Friday he calls upon the anti-Smith Democrats to meet in Roanoke June 18, for the purpose of selecting as their candidate for governor "an able, well qualified, anti-Smith Democrat, who did vote against Alfred Smith and did refuse to accept or follow the present national and State Democratic leadership, and who will continue to do so."

What end does Bishop Cannon seek to attain by opposing regular Democrats? The campaign of 1928 is history. The regular Democratic gubernatorial candidates in Virginia are just as dry or drier than the bishop himself. Since the Smith-Raskob elements have nothing to do with Virginia politics, Bishop Cannon seems to be intent upon the creation of a new political party. Who is a better leader of a new party than its creator?

Can it be that Bishop Cannon hopes to top his clerical collar with the politician's fedora? He has shown no compunction in the past at mixing religion and politics, and it may be that he sees no reason why Virginia should not be treated to the spectacle of an ecclesiastic waging his own political campaign. Is it to be Cannon for Governor of Virginia?

INTERNATIONAL AIRWAYS.

The announcement last week that two international air transport lines have plans for development of air routes between the United States and Argentina recalls a prediction by President Hoover during his South American tour last November that the two Americas would be linked by airways within a year. Soon after the prediction was made a network of air routes was extended into Mexico and Central America. Since then air mail service into some of the northern countries of South America has been inaugurated. It appears that direct service between New York and Buenos Aires, the South American metropolis, is about to be realized.

Brazil has awarded the Pan-American Airways, Inc., concessions for establishment of a commercial air transport line through that country. This company now operates an air mail and passenger system through the West Indies and to the Panama Canal Zone. Plans were recently announced for an 84-hour service between Miami and Buenos Aires and for another route down the East Coast to Brazil by way of the West Indies. A shuttle line would join the two systems along the north coast of South America.

An amphibian airplane was christened in Washington last week for service between New York and Buenos Aires. This plane is the forerunner of a fleet to be operated by the New York, Rio and Buenos Aires Line, Inc., which holds a contract with the Argentine government for carrying mail northward to the United States. The company reports the acquisition of airports in twenty cities on the east coast of South America including Pernambuco, Rio de Janeiro, Santos, Montevideo and Buenos Aires.

While these preparations are going on for extension of airways down the east coast of South America, the American air-mail system is gradually pushing its way southward on the western coast. Mail is carried from Miami to the Canal Zone three times each week and once a week to Mollendo, Peru. As soon as negotiations are completed for operation rights in Chile this service will be extended to Santiago. It will then be but a short hop over the mountains to Buenos Aires to link the Argentine capital with the West Coast system. This is the shortest route between the populous areas of the United States and the southern continent.

The importance of this development of airways is indicated by the fact that it will cut off traveling time between New York and Buenos Aires from 24 days by steamship to four days by airplane. Facility of communication is certain to strengthen the tie between the people of the two continents. Commerce will be stimulated and the United States will acquire an advantage in South American trade which is open to no other nation.

POLITICIANS AND PIE.

Patronage dispensers are not at all pleased with the conduct of President Hoover. They have been consistently ignored whenever the President has found that the position in question could be better filled without following their advice. Politicians of the South were first to learn of the President's position. He made absolutely plain to them that only the highest type of candidates would be considered, regardless of their political backing. Attention was especially centered on the appointment of independent and well-qualified Federal judges. To put an end to the recommendation of weak candidates for political reasons, he announced that names of congressmen and others sponsoring the successful nominees would be made public.

The immediate patronage problem is centered in the District. President Hoover has not followed the recommendations of the local Republican organization in making the last four appointments of District officials. The selection of Gen. Mason M. Patrick and Harleigh H. Hartman as members of the Public Utilities Commission was made without regard to the recommendation of local leaders. Senator Capper, chairman of the Senate District committee, has commended the President for selecting the best appointees obtainable, whether they please the local organization or not.

There is no reason why politics should be the dominant factor in choosing men to hold responsible positions in the District government. The President no doubt gives due consideration to the recommendations of the District Republican organization, but if he has in mind other candidates who are better qualified to fill the positions, it is his duty as well as his prerogative to choose the better men.

CONGRESS AND THE PRESS

By W. H. SMITH.

The fight that is now going on between the Senate and the newspapers is only a repetition of the struggle that began nearly 130 years ago. In the early days of the Republic, daily papers were very few, and none had enterprise enough to maintain a correspondent at the seat of Government to report the proceedings of Congress. While Philadelphia was the temporary Capital, an enterprising journalist named Smith began publishing a daily during the sessions of Congress, devoted to a report of the proceedings of that body.

When Congress came to Washington, Smith and his little paper came also. There was no such thing as a gallery for the special use of the press, nor was there any provision on the floor of the House or Senate for such purpose. Daily, during the sessions, Smith might be seen, with a small table over his shoulder and a small chair on his arm, trudging from Senate to House, or vice versa. Smith was a caustic writer and had no fear of dignitaries.

Theodore Sedgwick, of Massachusetts, was Speaker of the House during the Sixth Congress. The second session of that Congress was the first to hold its sessions in Washington. The newspaper man had been rather caustic in his comments on the rulings of the Speaker, so much so that the Speaker became angry and ordered the offending reporter excluded from the floor of the House. That did not stop the enterprising fellow. He found a corner in the gallery hidden from view of the Speaker and continued his reports and criticisms. It was several days before the Speaker discovered his enemy in the gallery and ordered his exclusion. This started a discussion in the House, when some angry things were said.

In February the House went into secret sessions for the election of a President, the contest being between Jefferson and Burr. To the amazement of the Speaker the little paper came out each morning with a full report of the voting. Where was the leak? was the question. Speaker Sedgwick was mad in earnest by this time, and he left the chair one morning to offer a resolution asking for the appointment of a committee to investigate the leak. He quickly found a whole nest of hornets buzzing around him.

The newspaper man found several defenders among the members of the House, his chief champion being another member of the Smith family. This was Samuel Smith, a representative from Maryland. His attack on the Speaker was so pungent that his investigating resolution was quickly tabled.

Several funny things occurred in the political history of this Maryland Smith family. It was Samuel, in the House, who turned the card which made Jefferson President instead of Burr. Jefferson was not forgetful. In the closing days of the Adams administration a new executive department was created, that of the Navy. Jefferson could not find an acceptable Secretary, so this Samuel Smith, though a member of the House, acted for several months as head of the Navy Department. He then induced Jefferson to appoint his brother, Robert Smith, a Baltimore lawyer, to the office.

After serving some time a vacancy occurred in the Attorney Generalship, and Robert Smith was nominated, confirmed and commissioned Attorney General, thus legally vacating his office as Secretary of the Navy. A new Secretary was nominated, confirmed and commissioned, but declined to accept. Smith remained at the head of the department without being renominated and confirmed, and a new Attorney General was named. Legally, this left Smith out in the cold, but he hung fast to the Navy Department until Madison boosted him to the head of the State Department. There he was such a failure that Madison contemptuously kicked him out.

Which It Is.

Atlanta Constitution: If the Government doesn't soon put into circulation that new paper currency we shall think that it is just passing the buck.

Practical Effect.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: The first practical result of the Supreme Court decision in the O'Fallon case was the sale of a 23-year-old automobile for $1,500 to the Smithsonian.

Let's Have More.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Mr. Mellon, quoting Franklin, says he's afraid he is "deficient in the Christian virtue of resignation." Well, that's a deficiency which, like carrots, we can't have too much of.

More Timely.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Columbia professor is asking people what they would do if they had a million. It might be more timely, following the recent market fluctuations, to ask some who had millions what they are doing without 'em.

Helpful Florida.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The Governor of Florida recommends an amendment reducing the length of residence necessary for divorce to six months. There is nothing that State won't do for the convenience of winter sojourners.

Clear Case.

Boston Transcript: A Los Angeles woman has been granted a divorce because her husband called her a hog after she had eaten food to the value of 80 cents in a cafeteria. At present prices a woman who spends less than a dollar for a luncheon has a right to feel hurt if she is called a hog. It would seem to be clearly a case of cruel and abusive treatment combined with failure to provide.

Tush! Tush!

Greensboro (N. C.) News: Baltimore Sun report of Senator La Follette's speech: "As the absurdity of the secrecy rule and the position of the rules committee continued to be unfolded, the delight of the Senate and galleries increased, and when, by a slip, Senator La Follette referred to Senator Simmons as 'the extinguished senator from North Carolina,' their joy was unconfined." The galleries, our guess is were filled with Tarheel unregenerates.

Costly Words.

Durham Morning Herald: Speaking of the high cost of words, Calvin Coolidge is a piker when viewed alongside the tariff bill. The former President got a lot of publicity because he signed up to write a number of articles at $1 and $2 a word. The tariff bill now in Congress has 85,000 words. Representative Garner estimates that if it is passed it will cost the consumers of the United States $800,000,000 a year. A little figuring shows that each word, counting all preliminaries of the tariff bill, will cost the people a little better than $5,882 a year.

If the Son Is a Fool, He Isn't the First in the Family.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

BRUCE BARTON tells a sad story about a rich manufacturer who was approached by a stranger in France and congratulated because his name stood for quality and square dealing throughout the world.

"What a satisfaction it must be," said the stranger.

But the famous manufacturer had found no pleasure in success. "I should feel as you suggest," said he, "but what does it all amount to when your son is a fool."

Mr. Barton would have us sympathize with the father, but I think him a greater fool than his son.

The bitterness of his shame and disappointment indicates that his son's lack of wit was hidden from him until recently. If he had known the truth years ago he would now be reconciled to it. And the rawness of his wound, confessing the shock of recent discovery, confesses also a long and unpardonable neglect of his son.

This man, being a manufacturer, knows how much skill and labor and patience are required to transform raw material into a finished product.

He knows it must be shielded from influences that would contaminate it; that it must be purged of dross; that it must be shaped and tempered and polished.

How carefully and intelligently he supervised the intricate processes required to perfect the article that won him fame as a manufacturer!

Not once did he trust to luck; not once did he surrender his plant to the whims of irresponsible men and dismiss it from his mind while awaiting the finished product.

And yet, incredible as it may seem, he gave no thought to the training of his son.

The boy was the apple of his eye—his pride and hope, and the goal of his ambitions.

Here was raw material infinitely precious—material to be refined and shaped and strengthened and polished—to be protected from harmful things and cleansed of impurities.

And the father entrusted these duties to chance and strangers, while he stood aloof and waited until the finished product should be placed in his hands for criticism.

"My son is a fool," said he.

A shoddy product, ruined in the process of manufacture! And so would his other products be ruined if neglected as he neglected his boy.

As pig iron may become a steel blade or a fence post, so the normal boy may become a great and wise man or a sneak and rogue, depending wholly on the intent and skill of the one who shapes the raw material.

If he becomes a fool, blame him little. Is the pig iron at fault if it becomes a sewer pipe instead of a ship's rudder?

GRANT'S TOMB.

About a quarter of the $400,000 fund for the completion and embellishment of Gen. Grant's Tomb already has been raised, says the New York Herald Tribune. The Memorial Day holiday is a reminder that we must complete the fund. When President McKinley dedicated the tomb 30 years ago it was unfinished because it had not been possible to raise the full amount of money required. A second failure should not be thinkable.

The City of New York is honored in that the remains of so great an American rest within it. We had no claim upon Grant. He was not born here; he never lived here until the end of his active life, and his final days in New York were not happy ones. There are even some who might argue that those great national qualities of ruggedness, simplicity and strength which Grant epitomized are not New York qualities. We do not believe that. We believe it to be fitting that this national hero should rest in the city which has become the Nation's metropolis; but the city must show that it appreciates the honor by giving him a fitting resting place.

BLOWING HOT AND COLD.

If a person blows forcefully upon his hand through nearly closed lips it has a cooling effect; but if he blows gently with the mouth open it has a warming effect, says the Pathfinder. Moisture in the skin is responsible for this difference. In the first case the breath is expelled so rapidly that it cools the skin by evaporating the moisture, while in the second case the skin comes in contact with the warm air without losing much of its moisture. Heat, like time, is measured only by its loss. If a person blows upon a thermometer instead of the skin the effect in both cases will be the same, or else reversed, because the instrument registers only the actual temperature. The cooling effect of an electric fan is due to the fact that each puff of air absorbs heat and moisture as it passes over the skin. The fan, in reality, raises the temperature of a room by setting the air in rapid motion. In the collection attributed to Aesop there is a fable on the subject of blowing hot and cold. A man who lost his way in the woods on a winter night was invited to take shelter in the cell of a satyr. The stranger, as he entered the cell, held his hands near his mouth and blew on them. Upon being asked by the satyr why he did this, he replied: "My hands are cold and my breath warms them." Later when a dish of hot porridge was placed before him the man raised a spoonful of it to his mouth and blew upon it. Again the satyr asked for an explanation. "The porridge is too hot," replied the guest, "and my breath cools it." This was too much for the host. "Get out," exclaimed the satyr. "I will have nothing to do with a man who blows hot and cold with the same breath."

ELECTRIC LIGHT STAMPS.

The new 2-cent stamp to be issued in commemoration of the production of the first incandescent electric lamp, which occurred on June 5, 1879, will rouse unusual interest, says the New York Times. The fact that Edison is still active and a well-known national figure gives the new stamp a special appeal. It is also a reminder to a generation that has taken electric lighting as much for granted as food or drink that the astonishing development has taken place within only a half century.

In remote districts the old kerosene lamps or their modern successors which use gasoline under pressure are still to be found. But even they are disappearing rapidly, owing to the successful introduction of cheap individual lighting plants which make it possible to furnish electricity for home uses many miles from the nearest power house.

The debt which the world owes Thomas Edison is so great that we can only visualize it by trying to imagine what life would be like if we had to return to the conditions which existed when his first lamp cast its first rays. The new stamp will help some of us understand this. In the process the name of Edison will acquire new luster.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Editor Edmonds Praises Sir Esme Howard for His Willingness to Dispense With Liquor Privilege.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the general discussion in regard to the diplomatic situation in connection with the recent correspondence between the British Ambassador and Mr. James T. Carter, of Virginia, I inclose a copy of a letter written on May 27 to the British Ambassador, thinking that possibly it will be of interest to some of your readers should you care to use any portion of it.

R. H. EDMONDS.
Editor Manfacturers Record.

Mr. Edmonds' letter to Sir Esme Howard reads in part as follows:

"Though it may not be in harmony with the diplomatic situation for this Government to make any suggestion of request of the representatives of foreign governments in regard to the non-use of liquors, nevertheless your letter to Mr. James T. Carter has been read with profound appreciation by millions of American people. You have thus strengthened the ties between these millions who believe in prohibition and the Government which you so ably represent.

"It may interest you to know that on June 13, 1922, Lord Leverhulme, one of England's greatest business leaders, ranking as among the foremost that England has ever produced, after two visits to the United States and a careful study of the prohibition problem, wrote me:

"'I am in receipt of your letter of the 2d instant, and it is quite correct that I stated a year or so ago that if we had prohibition in the United Kingdom, the saving in our drink bill would be sufficient to repay our indebtedness to the United States in less than five years. I am still of the same opinion.'

"Your letter expressing your willingness to abolish in the British Embassy the use of intoxicating liquors, as an expression of your interest in the desire to abide by the laws of this land if you should be so requested by the Government, will command word-wide discussion, and though diplomatic usage will probably not justify such a request by this Government, you have, I am sure, rendered a very great service to the world-wide discussion of how to prohibit the use of intoxicating liquors which have sent more men to the grave than even war itself with all of its horror.

"Please pardon me for thus trespassing upon your time in the interest of a great cause for the betterment of humanity."

Wrestling Held to Be the Best Exercise in Promoting Health and Long Life.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The interesting research work of Dr. Raymond Pearl, which you relate under the heading "Key to Long Life," is not new in itself. I conducted myself such an investigation some years ago, but more along physical lines so as to determine more definitely the value of correct physical training with regard to life extension.

The investigation was extended, through correspondents, in most of the civilized world, and the conclusion reached from accurate figures obtained in this country, as well as from Europe, Asia, Africa and South America, was: That conducive to the greatest longevity is the form of exercise requiring the most of "on four" position. Shadow wrestling appeared as the best exercise for men, as shown by the fact that in Turkey and India many wrestlers had successfully crossed the 100 year mark while retaining unusual strength and vitality. In Japan, where jiu jitsu is a national pastime, figures showed somewhat below those of the other two countries, due to the greater severity of the holds. Good reports came from Switzerland, where snow wrestling is practiced on a wide scale. They also were good from Germany, where a good deal of mild wrestling is indulged in. In this country, we found that wrestling—of not too great violence in the holds—is a sure winner toward the goal of a longer and healthier life.

The explanation is that wrestling, which is one of the first natural impulses of all four-footed creatures, is the one logical form of exercise as intended by nature herself.

There is no doubt that shadow wrestling can be of great physical benefit to practically any one within very wide age limits, and this applies to one sex as well as to the other, since there is here no danger of harm as in boxing or even fencing.

HENRY L. BURR.

Prohibition Enforcement Is Not a Woman's Job — Mrs. Willebrandt's Successor Should Be a Man.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that Mrs. Willebrandt has resigned let us hope that President Hoover will appoint a man at the head of the division which has charge of enforcing the Volstead act. It is no job for a woman. If President Hoover is anxious to have the prohibition law enforced effectively, he will give the post to a competent male attorney.

How the foolish notion of making a woman responsible for prosecutions under the Volstead act originated I don't know. It appears that Mrs. Willebrandt succeeded a woman, for no other reason than that the political balance had to be maintained by appointment of another woman from California. No one can deny that she has been energetic in trying to enforce the law, but a woman's tactics are not just the thing required for such a position.

According to the press, the resignation does not become effective until June 15. But it is quite likely that the President's mail is already being flooded with applications for the position from women who seek the notoriety Mrs. Willebrandt has enjoyed. But no woman is capable of doing the job as it ought to be done. Their sex unqualifies them for dealing with hijackers, bootleggers, rum-running racketeers and the like. An experienced man with excellent legal training and an understanding of the bootleg element with which he has to deal should be chosen for the place.

Five Senators Take House for Summer Place

By JEAN ELIOT.

WITH Congress destined to be in session for at least part of the summer, a group of senators have leased Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman's pleasant house at Edgemoor for several months. They propose to have a place of escape from the heat of midsummer in Washington, where they can maintain a bachelor menage while their wives are out of town. There are five in the group, among them Senator Walter Evans Edge, Senator Hiram Bingham and Senator Frederic C. Walcott.

Senator and Mrs. Walcott, it will be remembered, have President and Mrs. Hoover's house on S street as their permanent Washington home, but Mrs. Walcott expects to be away through the summer. Senator Bingham is now in New Haven, Conn., where he went with Mrs. Bingham a few days ago, but he is due back on Wednesday to stay until the Senate recesses, while Mrs. Bingham will remain for the present at their Connecticut home.

A little before June 15 the Tuckermans expect to leave Washington for Point Lookout, Md., and will spend several weeks at the Point Lookout Hotel, at which Mrs. Tuckerman's friend, Mme. Mishtowt, is filling the role of hostess. As the beauties of the Chesapeake region are being developed, Washingtonians are learning that they do not have to go very far away to enjoy salt breezes and Point Lookout is one of the resorts which boasts actual salt water bathing. Later in the summer Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman and their daughters will go to Southampton, Long Island, where they have a cottage.

Tuxeden, the Tuckerman's house at Edgemoor, has recently been in the hands of the builders, for Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman have added a ballroom, which will doubtless be used a lot next winter when their eldest daughter, Miss Laura Tuckerman, is to make her debut. Above are three pleasant bedrooms for three of the little Tuckermans who are rapidly growing up.

The party numbered the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. R. P. Lamont, Senator Reed Smoot, Senator Henry J. Allen, Representative and Mrs. Albert Johnson, Representative Cyrenus Cole, Representative and Mrs. Franklin Fort, Mr. and Mrs. John Mason Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Gould Lincoln, and William Henry, Mrs. Hoover's uncle.

British Ambassador Will Return Today.

The British Ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard will return today from Philadelphia, where they passed the week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Houston.

The Ambassador will entertain at dinner this evening in celebration of the birthday anniversary of King George of England.

The Cuban Ambassador, Senor Dr. Orestes Ferrara, returned last evening from New York, where he has passed several days with Senora de Ferrara. The latter has gone on to Boston, where she attended school and has many friends, to visit for some time.

MR. TWITCHELL on IMPROVING PUBLIC PARKS.

Mr. Elmer Twitchell today came out warmly in favor of what he called the "biddle-ing" of New York City's Central Park. "All this criticism of the city officials for allowing the Casino to be operated as a de duxe lounging place for the best people is the bunk," declared Mr. Twitchell. "The whole trouble with our parks today is that they are not exclusive enough. Anybody can get in."

• • • •

"Walk through any park today and what do you see?" demanded Mr. Twitchell. "A lot of ordinary people, that's what; people of the sort you could meet in the subway, on a trolley car or any othe roid place. Central Park in particular is fairly teeming with persons who have no social position. Probably nine out of every ten people you meet on park benches can not trace their ancestry back to the Mayflower. I spent an entire afternoon this week rowing in the park lake without bumping a single boat occupied by a Daughter of the American Revolution!

• • • •

"It is high time Mayor Walker and Park Commissioner Herrick took firm steps to make Central Park the sort of place a discriminating citizen would care to frequent. The new Biddle casino is a step in the right direction, but it is merely a step. The park will never be what it should be until it is made more exclusive from end to end. The way to do this is to post attendants at all entrances and keep out undesirables.

• • • •

"A charge should be made for seats on park benches. At present they are always crowded and you never sit on one with the assurance you will be sitting with somebody of influence and position. I favor leasing benches in the best locations to bench-holders just as boxes at the opera are leased to boxholders. The others could be let out at $15 or $20 a day You would be surprised to see what a difference this would make in the class of people sleeping on our park benches.

• • • •

"The situation with regard to rowing on Central Park Lake is disgraceful. All you have to do to get a rowboat is to ask for it. The attendant doesn't take your name or make the slightest inquiry into your ancestry. This means that anybody can go rowing. It is heartbreaking.

"I am writing to Mayor Walker urging that the boathouse be renovated by Urban and that all the boats be upholstered in green velour. I would let only the really worth while people have a rowboat.

• • • •

"Conditions on the bridle path are very bad. People are allowed to ride without any references. There have been complaints from the horses in some cases. And look at the people you see feeding pigeons and squirrels! In most cases they are mere nobodies."

• • •

Here Mr. Twitchel broke down and sobbed softly. "Is that fair to the pigeons?" he cried. "Is it fair to the squirrels?"

Of Course You Know It.

The Century Theater, or Morris Gest Stadium, opposite Central Park, will be torn down by the Chanins and a skyscrabed put up on the site. You know the building; it was formerly the old Fifty-ninth street car barn, later Madison Square Garden and just now being used as Grant's tomb.

Grover Whalen has forbidden smoking at New York police headquarters Possibly on the assumption his men have been looking for the Rothstein slayers blindfolded.

The Very Idea.

The news that a crusader like Mabel Willebrandt has given up her Assistant Attorney Generalship to take a job with an aviation company because of the big salary is shocking. It is as if back in the saloon-smashing days Carrie Nation had announced that she had thrown away her hatchet because she had found there was a bigger future selling automobiles.

Well, did you get through Decoration Day with your fenders still intact?

What Today Means to You

JUNE 3.

"GEMINI."

IF June 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 6:50 a. m. to 8:30 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:15 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 10 p. m.; the danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11:50 a. m., and from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m.

It is augured that June 3 will be one of perverse happenings. Changes will be projected, and not carried out. An atmosphere of suspicion and jealousy will cause much unhappiness, and social affairs will be disappointing to both the entertainers and their guests.

The child born on this date will have a very peaceful nature, and will shun any form of strife. It will be intellectual, ambitious, energetic and proud. Success and happiness are clearly marked out for it.

You are inclined to be over-conscious, and to feel your responsibilities too keenly. Your health, your happiness, and your mental efficiency are undermined through worry. Worry is the interest you pay on the trouble you borrow from the future. The wise man or woman never incurs this foolish debt, with its high rate of interest. You are very sensitive and are easily hurt by the words or actions of others, and many times your imagination leads you astray. Unless your ambitions become satisfied, you are apt to become melancholy.

Your greatest fault is that you feel lonely and isolated in life. You are much of the time disconcertingly "detached." You will continue to be lonely until you tear down the walls of suspicion, and all the imaginary barriers which now stand between you and others. No one desires affection and love more than you do, and you will receive both as soon as you cultivate more cheer, and you give more self-less love to others. Love begets love.

Steady, industrious persistency, more than your talents or originality, will be the cause of your greatest successes. If you espouse any cause, you make it your own, and stand by it to the death. You are not afraid of hard work.

DEFENSE IS PLANNED BY POWER INDUSTRY

HOLD COURSE JUSTIFIED

Atlantic City, N. J., June 2. (U.P.).—For the last year the light and power industry of the country has been under perhaps more violent fire than at any time in its history.

The Federal Trade Commission's investigation of power propaganda, the interest aroused by the revelation of the International Paper & Power Co.'s investments in newspapers, charges that power interests dipped their fingers into colleges and universities to the extent of putting profesors on their payrolls and giving too eager help in the preparation of school books, have confronted the industry with a situation which at least some of its leaders, jealous of the public's good will, consider acute.

So today the vanguard of 12,000 persons interested in the electric power business began gathering in Atlantic City to celebrate the fiftieth birthday of the electric light in a meeting at which they hope to thresh out some of the difficulties and give some answer to the criticisms of the last year.

12,000 Attend Convention.

The gathering is the fiftieth annual convention of the National Electric Light Association which is the organization of power companies of the United States.

The 12,000 to attend will range from such personalities in the industry as Martin Insull, of Chicago; P. S. Arkwright, of the Georgia Power Company, Atlanta; A. W. Robinson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Company; Britton I. Budd, president of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, and M. S. Sloan, of the New York Edison Company, down through the ranks of lesser lights, officials of smaller power companies, department heads, technical men, legal counsel, public relations experts and many others.

J. F. Owens, of the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company, Oklahoma City, is scheduled to deliver on Tuesday the answer of the power companies to the criticisms against them. He is expected to take the position that it is vital to the public that it be informed and educated with regard to the utilities which serve it; that the utilities themselves are the best source of information upon utility problems, and that, accordingly, schools are justified in consulting utilities for educational matter bearing upon them and utilities are justified in laying information before the public through the medium of the press.

Latest Inventions Displayed.

While this fiftieth birthday party of the electric light presents the guests with more than the usual amount of worries, they have brought their toys along. Chief among these toys is the "talkie." They sent representatives to Europe and prepared three talking motion pictures through the medium of which Sir Ernest Benn, British publisher; Don Alberto Pirelli, of Milan, Italy, president of the International Chamber of Commerce, and Sir Kengo Mori, chairman of the Japanese committee of experts to the reparations conference, will address the convention upon successive days.

Washington, Sunday, June 2—8 p. m.

For Virginia, mostly cloudy Monday and Tuesday with occasional showers; slightly cooler in east and central portions Monday; moderate northeast winds.

Pressure continues low from Newfoundland southwestward over the South Atlantic States and thence westward to the southern slope of the Rockies, Cape Race, Newfoundland, 29.58 inches; Chattanooga, Tenn., 29.70 inches, and Oklahoma City, Okla., 29.64 inches, while pressure continues high from Hudson Bay southward to the upper lake region, Fort Churchill, 30.34 inches, and Duluth, Minn., 30.34 inches. Pressure is relatively high on the north Pacific Coast, Prince Rupert, British Columbia, 30.32 inches, and east of the Bahamas, Turks Island, 30.04 inches. During the last 24 hours there have been rains over the central valleys, the middle plains States, and the northern Rocky Mountain region, and showers over the South Atlantic and east gulf States and the Canadian Maritime Provinces. The temperature is much lower over the Middle Atlantic and portions of the North Atlantic States, the Ohio and lower Missouri Valleys, and the northern and middle plains States, and is unusually low for the season over the northern portion of the Middle Atlantic States and the Ohio and lower Missouri Valleys.

The indications are for considerably cloudiness with showers over the southern portion of the Washington forecast district, and partly overcast weather over northern sections. It will be somewhat cooler Monday in the southern portion of the Middle Atlantic States, and continued cool over northern sections.

Expelled Obregon Aid Is Refugee in Havana

Havana, June 2 (A.P.).—Ricardo Topete, former chairman of the Obregon bloc in the Mexican chamber, who was recently expelled with many other deputies for alleged participation in the recent revolt, is now a refugee here. Topete is a brother of former Gov. Fausto Topete, of Sonora, one of the leaders of the revolt.

The chamber of deputies has preferred charges against Ricardo Topete and other former members and it was reported in Mexico City that he would face particularly heavy penalty if captured and convicted. He is now living at a modest hotel here with Gens. Iturbe and Encinas, also former rebel leaders.

REPARATIONS REPORT NEARING COMPLETION

Gilbert Loses Job as Agent for Payments if Document Is Approved.

DRAFT IS MADE SHORTER

Paris, June 2 (A.P.).—The loss by S. Parker Gilbert of his job as general agent for reparations payments will be one of the consequences of the report of the second Dawes committee, now well toward completion, if the governments accept it. Another important result will be the practical suppression of the reparations commission as a medium for payments, while an experiment with big possibilities in it will be the recommendation that a new international institution be set up to handle reparations called "The Bank for International Settlements."

Other interesting features apart from the proposed substitution of the annuities advanced by Owen D. Young, American chairman of the conference, for those of the Dawes plan will be a recommendation by the experts that their government clean up the last post-war problems yet unsolved, such as the obligation of Poland, Roumania, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Italy, as successors of Austrian territory, to pay a proportionate part of Austria's public debt.

Report to Be Shortened.

The work of the drafting experts has resolved itself into a work of compression. It was found that too many words were required to expatiate on all the vicissitudes of the conference, so everything but absolute essentials will be eliminated. The report, which in the first draft contained about 16,000 words, exclusive of the annex giving outline to the bank plan, will in its final form contain less than 10,000 words, it is now thought.

The document will open with a brief interpretation by the committee of terms and references under which it worked, followed by a short outline of the methods used and work adopted.

This will comprise an explanation of the committee's decision to recommend a new organization for receiving and distributing reparations and how this idea developed into a plan for the international bank. The idea was, it will be set forth in the report, to get away from everything which recalled war or conflicts immediately following war. This, of course, involved abandonment of the reparations commission under the new settlement plan.

As no minutes of the committee's deliberations were kept, its discussions, so far as will be referred to, will be briefly summarized. The report, so far as the actual activities are concerned, will begin with Mr. Young's memorandum outlining a method of procedure at the time when neither the Germans nor creditors were inclined to take the stand.

Creditors Demand to Be Presented.

This will lead up to presentation of the creditors' demand for 37 annuities of 2,200,000,000 marks; 21 annuities of 700,000,000 marks and one annuity of 900,000,000 marks. Since this proposal went by the board it will be disposed of briefly in the new report, which will, however, explain the methods and discussion which resulted from Mr. Young's memorandum.

The German offer of 37 annuities of 1,650,000,000 marks will also be dismissed with a bare explanation unless both sets of figures are left out altogether as having been superseded by Mr. Young's proposal. The American chairman's second invervention with proposed annuities of 2,050,000,000 marks (approximately $492,000,000) over a period of 37 years; 1,700,000,000 marks (approximately $216,000,000) for one year that were finally adopted with slight modifications will be explained at some length, probably with a summing up of conditions to which the Germans subordinated their acceptance. Those conditions already were in the second draft report along with observations made by the creditors. The drafting experts are now engaged in modifying them in accordance with the final agreement.

Developments Are Pending.

What the report will say concerning redemption by Germany of marks left in Belgium by occupying German forces depends on developments within the next two days. If an agreement is reached on that question outside of the committee, the report will ignore that subject. If no agreement is made and if the Belgians and French refuse to sign the report, in consequence a section will be added to explain that situation. In that case it is thought likely the report will be submitted to the reparations commission as a majority report with either an annex setting forth the French and Belgian points of view or a separate report by these countries to be submitted at the same time.

Specific recommendations in the report will be:

1—Substitution of Mr. Young's annuities as agreed upon for the Dawes plan.

2—Substitution of "the bank for international settlement" for reparations commission and agent general for reparations in receiving and distributing payments.

Two Years Time Limit Set.

3—Settlement by the governments as soon as possible and at the latest within two years of the questions of the obligations incurred by the successor states to Austrian territory.

4—Reduction and recovery of taxes imposed by creditor countries on German imports from 26 to 20 per cent.

5—Modification of the Dawes plan llen on German railroads to as to permit Germans to finance them.

6—Any eventful reduction in the allies war debts to the United States to be applied in reducing the annuities due from Germany.

7—A moratorium of two years to be eventually accorded on half of the protected part or 1,390,000,000 marks of the first series of annuities when financial difficulties of the Reich may require.

8—Commercialization as becomes possible of the amount representing the present value of 500,000,000 marks of the first 37 annuities.

It is unlikely the report will make any reference to war debts other than simple announcement of the agreement whereby German annuities would be reduced proportionately to any eventual reductions made by the United States in debts due them by the allies.

Mexican Envoy to U. S. On Way to Native Land

St. Louis, Mo., June 2 (A.P.).—Senor Don Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican Ambassador to the United States, passed through here yesterday on his way to Mexico City for a vacation. He said no political significance could be attached to his visit to his native country, where he expects to be about three weeks. He was accompanied by his wife, three children and his secretary.

Italian Opera Of Sodero to Be Continued

Last Portion of "Russian Shadows" on Air Over WRC Tonight; Varied Program of Music Is Scheduled on WMAL.

The first world premiere by radio of a grand opera by one of the most gifted of modern Italian composers will be concluded from WRC at 10 o'clock tonight, when the last half of "Russian Shadows" will be heard for the first time on the air.

"Russian Shadows" was composed by Cesare Sodero, maestro of the National Grand Opera Company, and the composer will take his usual place on the director's stand for the performance of his own work tonight.

The first half of the opera was broadcast last week, and a brief resume will precede tonight's performance of the concluding scenes. The cast is as follows: Varvara, Astrid Fjelde; Lida, Grace Leslie; Sonia, Paula Hemminghaus; Ivan, Julian Oliver; Baron Pinenoff, Fred Patton; Thomensky, Walter Preston; Petrovich, Frederic Baer, and Radinoff, Joseph Cavadori.

A program of summer music will be broadcast as the June-time offering of the Gypsies at 7:30 o'clock. Under the direction of Harry Horlick, the wandering minstrels will present the following program: "Bunch of Roses," a medley of Foster's Favorite Songs; "Dream," "The Love Dance," from "Madame Sherry;" "The Moonlit Glade," "Gloria," "Only for One Night," "Spanish Dance" and Herbert's "Badinage."

John Philip Sousa and his band again will be the featured attraction during the General Motors family party from 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

The drama in the development and growth of Alaska will be the story of the Empire Builders. Actual incidents of '98 will be included. The theme story will be that of a middle-aged, sophisticated woman of the Yukon, accused of claim jumping when she asserted her right to a portion of a very rich claim held jointly by two brothers.

The program opens in a Yukon dance hall, where the claims are being discussed, and a half-dead Indian enters and says that the two brothers involved are trapped in the snow several miles away. The men are afraid to go to the rescue, but the woman leads the rescue party.

Italy will furnish the background for the program that Musical Vignettes is to present from WMAL at 7 o'clock. The overture to Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers" will open this half-hour, and the "Dance of the Hours" from Ponchielli's "La Gioconda" will follow it. Two Italian numbers by the Russian composer, Tschaikowsky, the "Cappricio Italienne" and the "Neapolitan Dancing Air," from his "Suite Internationale," will be heard, and the intermezzo from Act II and Act III of Wolf-Ferrari's opera, "Jewels of the Madonna," will conclude this broadcast.

A trombone solo entitled "Slippin' Around," to be played by Tom Dorsey, will furnish the feature of the program to be broadcast by the Ceco Couriers at 7:30 o'clock. The trio will show its harmonizing abilities in the rendition of "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider," specially arranged for them, and by contributing the vocal chorus of "Love Me or Leave Me." The orchestra will play a medley of old favorites and will include among their offerings such numbers as "Ol' Man River" and "Yours Sincerely."

Mathilde Harding and Serge Kotlarsky will give the third in a series of joint piano and violin recitals, to be broadcast at 9 o'clock. Miss Harding has chosen Yon's "Alpine Nocturne" and the Mozart "Rondo" for her contributions. Mr. Kotlarsky will open the program with Mozart's "B Flat Sonata." His second group will consist of Kreisler's arrangement of Chaminade's "Caprice Viennois" and the program will close with his rendition of Vieuxtemps' "Rondino."

The Vitaphone Jubilee Hour will be presented at 8:30 o'clock.

Audrey Fern Brown, a 9-year-old pianist, will be featured from WOL in a short program at 6:45 o'clock today. David Martin, barytone, will be presented in a short recital at 7:30 o'clock.

William Tyler Page, clerk of the House of Representatives, will tell how he came to write the American Creed, from WJSV during the Songs of the American Revolution period at 9 o'clock.

Half of Chic Is in Wearing

© VOGUE

Every season, there is a new trend in the millinery mode, there are changes in the size of the brims, the crowns are higher or lower, the hats are placed a trifle differently on the head—and these details count toward making the chic of a hat. Just now, the emphatic note is a matter of showing the forehead or accenting an eyebrow—but this does not mean merely pushing the hat up or wearing it on the back of the head.

A hat should look as though it were made on the head, and the only way to judge its effect is to view it from all angles—in relation to the contours of the face, neck and profile and in relation to each part of the hat itself. Thus, the hat and face must be a perfect composite.

The young woman shown in the sketch has found a hat that suits her, fits her and is the dernier cri of chic. The off-the-forehead movement and the lifted brim are smart details that vie for interest with the black picot straw and rose-mauve grosgrain ribbon. The hat as shown here in three views is, worn as it was designed to be—firmly on the head, straight above the eyebrows and low on the neck.

Myths of Olden Times.

I. SET AND OSIRIS.

THIS week I am going to tell you some of the myths of ancient times. A myth is a story which is not true; but many persons used to believe each of the tales I shall relate.

Isis Searching for Osiris.

A good story to start with is the one told in ancient Egypt about Set and Osiris. The Egyptians said that Set was god of darkness, while Osiris was ruler of the light of day, the son of Heaven and Earth.

Set was mean of nature, and did not like Osiris. He laid plans to capture the sun-god, and at last succeeded. Osiris was cut up into 42 pieces and the pieces were hidden away.

Isis, the faithful wife of Osiris, missed her husband, and wondered what could have happened to him. Time passed, and he did not return; so she went forth and searched for him. Far and wide she looked—and at last she came to the hiding place which Set had chosen. There was the body of the sun-god, in pieces!

The goddess felt that her heart would break, but she gained control of herself and decided to do what she could. She managed to put the pieces together, and to her joy Osiris returned to life.

Yes, the god came back to life; but it was not possible for him to be the sun-god any longer. It became his lot to be ruler of the Next World—to judge the souls who ask to be admitted to the bright and beautiful land which the Egyptians called the Fields of Aalu.

That story was probably meant to explain how the sun happens to leave the sky each day at sunset, and how darkness gains hold of the earth.

Did you ever stop to think that each of us can take the part of the sun-god or the god of darkness? If we try to promote truth and beauty and things which are good, we are helping the side of light. Persons who are careless of the truth, or say mean things to hurt other persons, are helping the side of darkness.

This is a world in which we can do much to choose our own path. Which side do you want to help as you go through life?

"Parking With Peggy"

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE OLD MAN.

As down the street a youngster ran,
Although the path seemed wide,
Today I saw a gray old man
Who smiled and stepped aside.

So strange his action seemed to me,
I turned to him and said:
"Why did you step aside that he,
So young, might run ahead?

"For you the youngster should have stayed,
And followed in your track."
The old man answered: "I'm afraid
I should have held him back.

"Time was that I was young and bold
And swiftly I could run,
But now I'm slow of foot and old
And all my work is done.

"To notions of the past I'm tied,
I've lived my little day.
And now I'd rather step aside
Than block a youngster's way."

God grant to me so much of grace
When all my strength is gone,
That I can smile and give my place
To youngsters rushing on!

Radio Show Is Forecast Of New Sets

Chicago Exhibit Attended by 30,000 Tradesmen as Public Is Barred; Credit Situation Bothers; Many Improvements Noted.

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

Chicago, June 2.—Dwarfing what Chicago contends to be the largest hotel in the world and overflowing into and filling to capacity the city's next two biggest hotels, the third annual Chicago radio show has the town by the ear. This is literally true, because though there is expected to be an attendance of close to 30,000 persons, the public will not be admitted and the nearest it will get to the show will be the concerts broadcast from the exhibition halls.

And who, the Washington listener no doubt inquires, are these 30,000 persons if they are not the public. The answer is—the trade. Radio in an amazingly short time has grown until its annual volume of business is said to be $800,000,000. These 30,000 are the radio manufacturers, jobbers and dealers, and they are here from all over the United States

The reason for this is that the Chicago show is really a preview for next fall. In the $1,000,000 exhibit of radio sets are models not yet in production and which the public will not see nor hear until August or September.

The only cloud on the horizon that mars the outlook for the 1929-1930 season is the Federal Reserve Board's lack of decision in handling the credit situation, according to leaders in the radio industry. It is their opinion that the Federal Reserve should stop its drifting attitude and either raise the discount rate or make a statement that will restore confidence in business.

Hopeful of Relief by Fall.

They feel that record sales will be made, especially after the crops are in, but if the Federal Reserve Board continues its present policy the sale of radio sets will be one of the first, along with automobiles, to feel the depression caused by high money rates.

"We are hopeful," said a representative of the Radio Manufacturers Association, "that the Federal Reserve Board will get the credit situation cleared up before September 1, at the latest. Summer sales will no doubt be hurt by the breaks that have occurred in the market since May 1. We regret that confidence in the business outlook has been hurt by the way the Reserve Board has allowed the situation to drift and then holding the discount rate threat over the market. A bull market is far more of an incentive to buy a new radio set than is a bear market and constant fear of a business depression.

"We hope that the Reserve Board will take a definite stand. If it can not, then we hope that President Hoover will let the country know that business is not to be interfered with by the action of the board. It is time that something definite was heard from Washington. If the bright era of the Coolidge prosperity is to be darkened by credit clouds of the Hoover administration, the radio industry will feel the slump, because fewer radio sets will be sold. We caution manufacturers against overproduction unless the credit situation shows signs of clearing."

Screen-Grid Tubes Feature.

Getting back to the listener, what is, or is to be, the latest in radio as revealed by the Chicago show? Certainly the new screen-grid tubes are in evidence, if not the most-talked-of feature of the exhibition. All sorts of claims are being made for these tubes which seem to be revolutionizing things in bringing about extreme sensitivity, needle-point selectivity in tuning, and by apparently fulfilling the demands for 100 per cent broadcast reception.

With dynamic speakers gaining popularity, there is a marked improvement in the reproduction of the bass notes. They are of larger diameter than ever before and made more rugged, so as to take care of the increased power which characterizes all new sets.

There have been refinements in selector tuning, or employing a device which automatically tunes the set to one of a number of predetermined stations. Remote control, by which the radio receiver may be tuned in any room in the house is a part of standard equipment exhibited by one manufacturer. Others will follow with this shortly, and just as homes now have a telephone extension upstairs or elsewhere, the day seems to be at hand when we may have radio in as many rooms as desired.

Feminine Hand Seen.

Marking the passing of unsightly receiving sets there is a definite trend to console models. All in all, design, construction, and finish are far superior to that of years previous—undoubtedly the result of feminine appreciation for fine furniture in radio sets.

And finally, the best news of all to listeners, in proportion to what is now being offered, prices are coming down. A canvass of manufacturers reveals the fact that the radio-buying public is to receive a greater amount of radio, per dollar expended, than ever before in the history of the industry. The opinion has been advanced that the radio buying dollar is nearly approaching the value of the dollar spent for automobiles. A console set can be purchased now for one-half the cost of the large receivers a year ago.

No less than nine companies are making their debut at the Chicago show as manufacturers of radio receivers. The new set makers are Associated Radio Manufacturers, Inc., Balkite Radio Co., Gulbransen Piano Co., Silver-Marshall, Inc., Story & Clark Piano Co., Temple Corporation, Victor Talking Machine Division of the Radio Corporation of America, and United Reproducers Corporation. A total of 210 manufacturers are exhibiting sets and speakers.

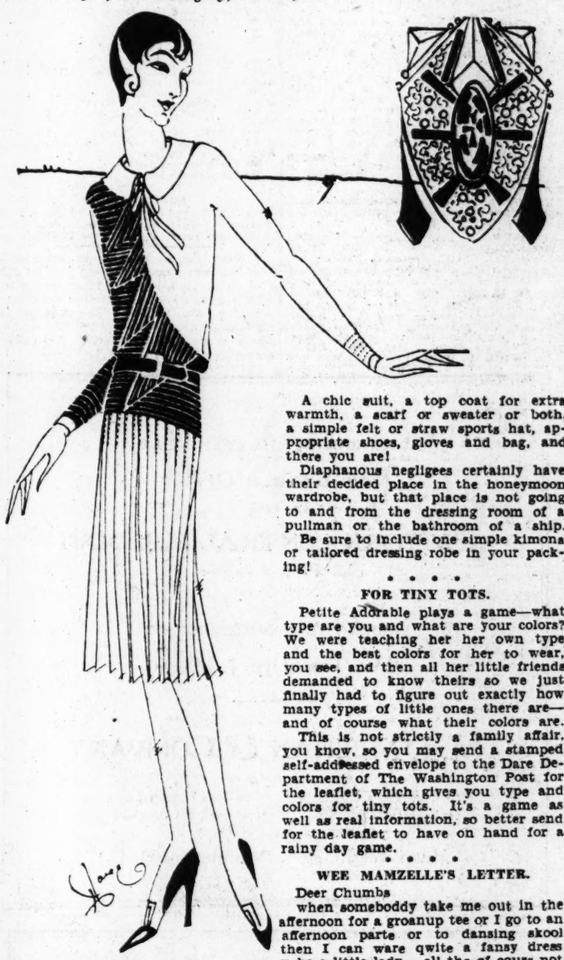
Dare Interprets the Mode

A charming example of the ever popular sports dress, in two shades of green jersey. The triangular incrustations of the darker green are covered with rows of stitching, and the dark green side of the jumper has tiny pleats all o r. Nice? (Courtesy of Jane Regny, Paris.)



WHAT are you going to wear on your honeymoon—for the traveling, I mean?

Yes, you must change into traveling togs whether or not you are married in a tailored suit—because however lovely it may be it will undoubtedly be too dressy for traveling.

There just are times when one must sacrifice a flair for the artistic to good taste, and this is one of them. Traveling togs must be simple and practical, whether this traveling be on your honeymoon or any other time. And the duration of the trip hasn't a great deal to do with it either.

A chic suit, a top coat for extra warmth, a scarf or sweater or both, a simple felt or straw sports hat, appropriate shoes, gloves and bag, and there you are!

Diaphanous negligees certainly have their decided place in the honeymoon wardrobe, but that place is not going to and from the dressing room of a pullman or the bathroom of a ship.

Be sure to include one simple kimona or tailored dressing robe in your packing!

FOR TINY TOTS.

Petite Adorable plays a game—what type are you and what are your colors? We were teaching her her own type and the best colors for her to wear, you see, and then all her little friends demanded to know theirs so we just finally had to figure out exactly how many types of little ones there are—and of course what their colors are.

This is not strictly a family affair, you know, so you may send a stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the leaflet, which gives you type and colors for tiny tots. It's a game as well as real information, so better send for the leaflet to have on hand for a rainy day game.

WORK ON BRIDGE

(This article is intended for the bridge novice).

THE Whist Club, New York, has promulgated codes of laws for both Auction and Contract Bridge. These codes were prepared with the cooperation and hearty approval of all the leading clubs of the country; they have the indorsement of both the American Bridge League and the American Whist League, and they are observed by all experts; so there should be no question whatever concerning the correct procedure in either game. But in spite of this, there is an amazing amount of ignorance in many sections of our broad land, about some questions which arise frequently during an ordinary game of bridge. Many players have not taken the trouble to read the laws, and some do not seem to realize that a code exists; they play by the "they say" rules which frequently are radically incorrect. The laws concerning which there seems to be considerable ignorance will be explained today and on succeeding Mondays.

A New Deal

There must be a new deal if, during the deal, any card be found faced in the pack or be exposed on, above or below the table. That is the law, no matter how seemingly unimportant the exposed card may be. Many players are under the impression that there is a new deal only when the exposed card is an honor. That mistake is due to confusion with another law which provides that when, during the auction, a player exposes a card, his partner is debarred from further participation in that auction when the card is an honor; but when the exposed card is a Nine or lower card, the partner is not subject to the severe penalty of being prohibited from bidding or doubling.

Another law which is not generally understood: When one player is found to have less than the proper number of cards and the other three have the right number, the deal stands if the missing card can be found. It should be searched for in the still pack, among the quitted tricks, on the floor, or wherever it might possibly be, and when recovered it becomes the property of the player who is short, in which case he (unless dummy) is liable for revokes (if any) just as if that card had been continuously in his hand. When the missing card can not be found, the deal is thrown out.

When one player has less than the proper number of cards and another has more, the deal is thrown out, no matter when the error is discovered and regardless of whether the players with the incorrect number of cards are partners or adversaries.

Short Sleeved Frocks Are Arriving From Paris

Patou, Cheruit and Chanel are sponsoring the vogue and here's a Jelleff adaptation already.

Casual little sleeves that barely cap the shoulder have a most far-reaching fashion effect because they are cool, chic and sufficiently formal to wear in town as well as in the country .... and notice how the skirt expresses its individuality by a front and back drape. This gown is of a rare tea rose print on chiffon.

Arkansas Natural Gas Corporation

(Subsidiary of Cities Service Company)

CLASS A COMMON STOCK

The Class A Common Stock is authorized in the amount of 4,000,000 shares without par value similar in all respects to the Common Stock of the Corporation, except that the Class A Common Stock has no voting rights other than as provided by law.

Transfer Agents:
HENRY L. DOHERTY & COMPANY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

WELLS FARGO BANK & UNION TRUST COMPANY, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

For further information regarding the Corporation and the Class A Common Stock, attention is called to the letter of Mr. Henry L. Doherty, president of the Corporation, copies of which will be furnished on request, and from which it will be noted, among other things, that:

COMPANY: Arkansas Natural Gas Corporation, a Delaware corporation, was formed by merger of Arkansas Natural Gas Company, Natural Gas and Fuel Corporation and Industrial Gas Company, and acquired through stock ownership the natural gas property of Southwestern Gas and Electric Company and certain other properties in 1928. The Corporation and its subsidiaries are hereinafter referred to as the "Company."

The properties are located in eastern Texas, northwestern Louisiana and central Arkansas, and include 1,800 miles (of which 82 miles are held under lease) of natural gas pipeline and distribution mains and are in a territory extending from Shreveport, Louisiana, to Little Rock, and Clarksville, Arkansas, a distance of approximately 300 miles. The pipeline system transported during the twelve months ended March 31, 1929 a daily average of 109,000,000 cubic feet of gas and the Company supplies gas at retail to over 44,000 customers in 52 communities. The population of the territory served is estimated at 442,000. Among important cities served are Shreveport, Texarkana, El Dorado and Little Rock. In addition, gas is supplied at wholesale to Hot Springs, Camden and Clarksville, Arkansas. The Company has a present daily production of about 4,300 barrels of crude oil, and owns six natural gasoline plants having an average daily output of 22,000 gallons of high grade gasoline.

The company owning the gas distributing system at Little Rock, Arkansas, having a population of about 123,000, has been acquired since January 1, 1929, as well as other gas pipeline and distributing properties in Arkansas and Louisiana. These acquisitions will add over 21,000 retail customers and over 400 miles of distribution lines and trunk pipelines to the system of the Company. The Company plans the construction during 1929 of a 20-inch pipeline from Shreveport to the Monroe gas fields, a distance of about 100 miles.

The principal franchises and similar permits of the Company are satisfactory for its operations and contain no unusual or burdensome restrictions.

CAPITALIZATION: The consolidated capitalization of the Company and subsidiaries outstanding as of December 31, 1928, after giving effect as at that date to the recent issuance of Class A Common Stock as more fully described below, is as follows:

	Shares Outstanding
STOCKS:
6% Cumulative Preferred Stock ($10 par value)	2,191,510
Minority Interest in Subsidiary Preferred and Common Stocks ($25 par value)	78
Common Stock (no par value)	4,084,225
Class A Common Stock (no par value)	1,021,056
FUNDED DEBT:
First Mortgage 6% Gold Bonds, due 1943	$13,000,000*
Underlying Gold Bonds, due serially to 1931	9,000
Two year 6% Notes, due 1930	2,934,773

* Issuance of additional bonds restricted by provisions of Trust Indenture.

The Class A Common Stock is authorized in the amount of 4,000,000 shares, without par value, similar in all respects to the Common Stock of the Corporation, except that the Class A Common Stock has no voting rights other than as provided by law. The above stated 1,021,056 shares of Class A Common Stock have become outstanding through the exercise of rights offered holders of the Common Stock of record April 16, 1929 and sale of the shares not so subscribed for. Additional shares of Class A Common Stock will become outstanding. The proceeds of all of such shares of stock have been or are to be used in connection with the acquisition of properties, permanent improvements or betterments to properties, or for other corporate purposes. The acquisition of properties and permanent improvements to properties since December 31, 1928, together with those then and since completed and under way, and contemplated, involve an expenditure of more than $10,000,000. Certain of the recent acquisitions have outstanding liens aggregating $2,204,000.

EARNINGS: The consolidated earnings of the Company and subsidiaries, including predecessor companies, for the twelve months ended December 31, 1928, irrespective of the dates of acquisition, as certified by Arthur Young & Company, were:

Gross Earnings	$8,591,708
Operating Expenses, Maintenance and All Taxes	4,448,533
Net Earnings	$4,143,175
Fixed Charges, including annual interest on outstanding bonds	1,058,821
Balance for dividends, reserves, etc.	$3,084,354
Annual dividend requirements on $21,915,100 6% Preferred Stock	1,314,906
Balance available for depreciation and other reserves, and dividends on common stock	$1,769,448

The above statement does not give effect to the acquisition of properties which the Company has purchased since January 1, 1929, the operations of which together with other important developments are expected substantially to increase the earnings.

GAS SUPPLY: The gas is obtained principally by purchase under favorable long term contracts from other producers in Texas and Louisiana which is augmented by the Company's production. The Company owns approximately 16,000 acres of proved gas leaseholds and 124,000 acres of other leaseholds.

TERRITORY: The territory reached by this gas pipeline system has had a steady growth for several years. In addition to the cotton industry and cotton seed oil mills there are timber mills, railroad shops, iron foundries, brick plants, tile works, cement factories, and refineries throughout a wide territory and indicating possibilities of increasing demands for gas for industrial purposes.

MANAGEMENT: The Arkansas Natural Gas Corporation is a subsidiary of Cities Service Company and its operations are supervised (under the direction and control of the Board of Directors) by Henry L. Doherty & Company.

Mangan Beats Charest for City Title

Frances Krucoff Wins Singles but Loses in Doubles Finals.

THREE championships were won yesterday in the Washington tennis tournament, in progress for the past week on Reservoir courts. In the men's singles, Tom Mangan won over Clarence Charest, 6—2, 7—5, and 6—2, while in the women's singles Miss Frances Krucoff defeated Miss Phoebe Moorhead, 6—2, 6—3. The women's doubles match was won by Mrs. Charles Rowan and Mrs. C. Francis Norment over the Misses Frances Krucoff and Josephine Dunham, 9—7 and 6—3.

Mangan gained the Jock McLean trophy by defeating Charest, while Miss Krucoff won the Pearson-Crane cup. The winning team of Mrs. Rowan and Mrs. Norment in the women's doubles received the Washington Tennis Association trophy.

With these three championships won, there will be one more decided today, when Tom Mangan and Clarence Charest pair against Maurice O'Neil and Hal Fowler in the men's doubles finals. This match will begin at 3 o'clock.

Charest Puts Up Fight In Second Set Only.

Mangan, in defeating Charest in three straight sets, won easily in two of them, the first and last, wearing down Charest's play with his well-known driving power. Charest got in his cross-court work in the second set despite the fact that he finally bowed and for a time looked as if he might extend the match to the five games. Mangan's powerful driving, especially while serving, proved decisive, however.

Although Miss Phoebe Moorhead played well at the nets, her work failed to measure up to the consistent play of Miss Frances Krucoff, who took both sets in fast order. Miss Moorhead tired after keeping pace for a time.

The first set of the Rowan-Norment and Krucoff-Dunham doubles was keenly contested. The large gallery were kept on edge throughout. Mrs. Rowan's service was exceptionally strong and kept the Krucoff-Dunham pair on their toes at all times, while the play of Miss Dunham in front of the net continually was dangerous because of her ability to chop returns into unoccupied places of the court. The set ended after much spirited play with Mrs. Rowan and Mrs. Norment the conquerers by the above mentioned score, 9—7.

Largest Gallery of Tourney Turns Out to See Sport.

In the second set the Misses Krucoff and Dunham showed signs of tiring. Mrs. Norment was especially prominent here as she tore a leaf out of Miss Dunham's notebook in chopping returns back in quick order for points. The Mrs. Rowan and Norment got a lead of 4 to 1 in games at the outset, divided the next two, lost the following and then won the deciding game for the set.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES—Mrs. Charles Rowan and Mrs. C. Frances Norment defeated Miss Frances Krucoff and Miss Josephine Dunham, 9—7, 6—3.

MIXED DOUBLES—Frazier and Mills defeated Shelling and Deck, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2.

MIXED DOUBLES—(Pairings for today, second round). McKelvy and Hotskin vs. Dunham and Wilton. Krucoff and Haas vs. Wells and Considine. Kinbsbury and Gore vs. Guilford and Seidel. Martinez and Martinez vs. Moorhead and Rutley. Judd and Judd vs. Rowan and Rowan. All matches at 5 o'clock.

Salo Forges to Front Again in Bunion Derby

Bylas, Ariz., June 2 (A.P.).—Fighting desperately for the lead as C. C. Pyle's bunion derby swung into its final two weeks, Johnny Salo, the flying cop, of Passaic, N. J., today forged to the front by a margin of 16 minutes and 49 seconds on the lap from Safford, Ariz., to Bylas. The stretch was 37 miles.

the most powerful drivers in feminine tennis and provided more severe stroking than did the Cochet-Borotra struggle.

Old King Sol, who had been working overtime every day throughout the tournament, chose the next to the last day for resting, and James Jupe Pluvius took his place, making threatening gestures. Heavy clouds, rolled along by a strong cross-current wind, brought about the worst conditions of the tournament.

The two girls started at a whirlwind pace. In the first set the French woman once led, three games to two, but Miss Wills, apparently troubled by the cross-court breeze, played more carefully to run out four straight games and the set. Neither girl once ventured to the net. All points were won through fast and furious driving, which resulted either in clean placements or adversary's errors. Mme. Mathieu, with nothing to lose and desirous of making the best possible showing, played a much better game than she had against Cecelie Aussem, of Germany, the day before, when she stressed caution.

Miss Wills Overpowers Opponent Near End.

Mme. Mathieu changed her tactics in the second set and began to drop tantalizing drop shots over the net when she was trailing, one game to three. This soft stroking seemed to bother Miss Wills and the French woman brought the score to four all. This effort tired Mme. Mathieu, however, and she had nothing left to meet the dazzling power of the American's game, and Miss Wills ran out two games for set, match and championship.

Borotra triumphed over Cochet in what was probably the fastest tennis match ever played here so far as speed of foot was concerned.

Cochet, without exerting either mind or body, apparently looked like the greatest natural player in the game, but he overdid his nonchalance.

Reinstatement Sought by Barbuti

Hamm, Kuck, Conger Other Stars Compete in July.

DENVER, June 2 (A.P.).—The Denver committee in charge of the A. A. U. track and field championship here July 3, 4 and 5 has been informed that Ray Barbuti, the only American to win a flat race for the United States in the 1928 Olympics at Amsterdam, has resumed training and will apply for reinstatement in the A. A. U. with the intention of entering the Denver games.

Barbuti, suspended after he had charged that star athletes were being paid excessive sums for expenses for competing in meets, has refused to answer letters concerning his entry, but officials said they were confident he would make an effort to be reinstated and run the 440-yard dash.

Two-thirds of 1928 Olympic Team Likely to Compete.

Present indications are that at least two-thirds of America's 1928 Olympic team membership will be represented in the local games. Among those who have signified their intention direct to the A. A. U. commitee are Charley Borah, Sabin Carr, Alfred Bates, Carl Ring, "Bud" Houser, Lee Bartlett, Steve Anderson, Lloyd Bourgeois, Bob Kelly, Walter Geyan, Claude Bracey, Jimmy Quinn, Herman Brix, J. F. Anderson, Ben Hedges, Arthur Sager, Charles Harlow, Charley Paddock, Edward Gordon and Jackson Scholz.

Four of six of the Olympic winners are included in the lists submitted by athletic clubs, Eddie Hamm, world's record holder in the broad jump; John Kuck, winner of the shot put; Jim Stewart, decathlon; Ray Conger and Leo Lermond, mile runners, and Jim Stewart will be here.

High Altitude Not to Hinder Runners, Says Coach Cromwell.

Dean Cromwell, coach of the University of Southern California track teams, says he does not look for Denver's mile-high altitude to affect athletes except possibly in the 6-mile run. "I do feel," he wrote to the committee, "that the excellent climate will serve as a very fine stimulus in the dashes and perhaps the hurdles."

"Big Ten" Committee To Discuss Iowa Case

Champaign, Ill., June 2 (A.P.).—Prof. George A. Goodenough, of the University of Illinois, tonight announced that a special faculty committee composed of P. E. French, Ohio State University, and President James Page, of the University of Minnesota, will meet with representatives of the University of Iowa Tuesday morning at Chicago to discuss Iowa's petition for reinstatement into the Big Ten Conference.

Prof. Goodenough said the special committee would discuss the Iowa petition with Hawkeye representatives and would recommend a course of action to the faculty committee.

He said the meeting might result in one of three courses of action. They were:

Recommendation that severing of athletic relations with Iowa after January 1, 1930, by the other Big Ten institutions be reaffirmed;

That the period from the time of the meeting to January 1, 1930, be considered a probationary one, after which decision would be made on Iowa's status;

U. S. Net Stars Abroad Leave for New Scenes

Paris, June 2 (U.P.).—The American tennis players tonight prepared to leave for other fields to continue their foreign campaign.

Big Bill Tilden, Frank Hunter and Junior Coen will leave tomorrow for Zurich to play Switzerland in a team match. Helen Wills and the other, American women players will leave for Berlin for a series of matches against the leading German players.

On Saturday the entire group will assemble at The Hague to begin practice in preparation for the Dutch championships beginning June 10.

Lefty Shaute Routed As Red Sox Win, 12-3

Boston, June 2 (A.P.).—The Red Sox knocked Lefty Joe Shaute from the box in the third inning and proceeded to defeat Cleveland, 12 to 3, here today. Milton Gaston hurled a three-hit game for the Sox after the third inning.

Remarkable one-hand catches were made by Bill Barrett and Rothrock. Morgan, Cleveland right fielder, collided with the bleacher wall in chasing Scarritt's long fly, which went into the stand for a homer. He was knocked unconscious but was revived and walked from the field, apparently only jarred.

GIANTS RALLY TO DEFEAT CUBS

CHICAGO, June 2 (A.P.).—The explosion of Sheriff Fred Blake in the seventh inning enabled the Giants to rush through the broken defense of the Cubs for six hits and four runs, which gave New York a 4-to-1 decision over the Bruins before 37,000 Sabbath spectators. Larry Benton held the home team to five scattered hits and was not scored on until the ninth, when Norman McMillan popped one into the right field seats for a homer.

The victory gave the Giants a record of four straight and ten of the last eleven. The seventh round assault, which proved the undoing of Blake, consisted of Lindstrom's double and five singles. Mike Cvengros and Berlyn Horne inherited the pitching job after Blake was led from the premises.

YANKS SCORE WITH RUTH MISSING

Gehrig Hits His 12th; Chisox Bow, 6-1; Babe Has Cold.

NEW YORK, June 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Henri Louis Gehrig met Sammy Byrd and Cedric Durst in the runway leading to the bench at the Yankee Stadium today.

"Where you going?" asked Lou.

"Didn't you hear?" chorused the two; "the Babe is out of the game. He can't play."

"I'm going to hit for him," said Durst. "I hit fourth."

"I'm going to field for him," said Byrd. "I'm playing right."

Which was all true. The Babe was out of the game for the first time in a long while, to disappoint a big crowd of 40,000. He has a heavy cold on his big chest. But the Yankees went on and won just the same, drubbing the White Sox for a second time in two days. The score was 6 to 1.

And the remarkable part of it all was that the youngsters did just what they said they'd do. Byrd was all over the field in right to make three great catches, and Durst hit a home run with Gehrig on base in regular Ruthian style.

Of course, other things of interest happened. Gehrig himself, not to be outdone by mere kids, hammered his twelfth homer of the year in the first inning and now is tied with Klein, of the Phils, for the four-bagger leadership. And George Fipgras pitched one of his best games to add to his string of victories. He allowed six hits and one run to the Sox. There were three Chicago pitchers, Young Ed Walsh, Harold McKain and George Connally.

Dempsey Joins Wife; Denies Marital Rift

Los Angeles, June 2 (A.P.)—Jack Dempsey, former world's fistic king, who returned to Los Angeles for two weeks' vacation with his wife, Estelle Taylor, motion picture actress, spent this morning denying he would reenter the ring on a comeback campaign in the near future. In the afternoon he visited Hollywood.

Dempsey arrived late last night by plane from Kansas City and New York.

Rumors of pending marital disturbances in the Dempsey family, renewed in spite of recent denials when Miss Taylor failed to meet the former champion at the air terminal, were denied by Dempsey today. He dismissed the subject with "that's so much bologna."

New Georgetown Stadium Included in Building Program

A STADIUM seating 20,000 and capable of expansion is included in the plans for a "greater Georgetown University" which already are materializing in the erection of a combined medical and dental school on Reservoir road, the northern boundary of the university's extensive property.

At present it is not expected that the stadium will be a reality for six or seven years, but the field it will inclose probably will be ready for use by next spring, as the old Hilltop field is to be the site of three new buildings, the first of which is to be started during the winter or early spring.

Natural Amphitheater Site Of New G. U. Stadium.

The new field and stadium will be situated in the natural amphitheater almost due west of the present field, and will be accessible from Conduit and Reservoir roads. Adjacent vacant land will provide plenty of space for the parking of automobiles.

The Hilltop field's long period of service will terminate with the close of football practice next fall, unless it is decided to postpone the start of construction work on the three new buildings until the end of spring and the academic year. The first building to be raised will be known as Senior Hall, a dormitory for fourth-year students, and when the group is completed a huge quadrangle will lie within.

Although the new field will be in use before another year passes, Georgetown will not play its football games there until the stadium is erected. Griffith Stadium will continue to be the home ground for the Blue and Gray Eleven for several years.

Old Hilltop Field Scene of Number of National Events.

The passing of Hilltop field will close the pages on a colorful history which covered events of national character as well as local. During the Civil War the field was the site of two camps of Georgetown students, one composed of Northern Army recruits and the other of candidates for the Confederate forces. Though they ultimately were to fight for opposite causes, friendliness existed between both factions throughout the training period.

Braxton, Gray Named Today; Liska Is Ready

THE Nationals and Browns, who broke even in St. Louis last month and have divided the only two games played here so far this season, will break the deadlock at the Clark Griffith Stadium this afternoon. Sam Gray, Howley's best pitcher this season, will get the call and likely will find Garland Braxton opposing him on the hill. The Nats beat Gray in St. Louis on their visit there and are confident that they can do it again.

Adolph Liska, the Nats' sensational rookie, whose underhand delivery has caused considerable excitement throughout the league this season, reported to Manager Walter Johnson yesterday that he was ready to perform. He probably will be used in tomorrow's final of the series with the Browns.

Liska has been out of action nursing a sprained ankle since May 17 and his return certainly will be welcome to his mates. With him ready and "Sad Sam" Jones, the other casual, on the mend, the Nats' prospects are much brighter than they were.

Two veterans tried to "outsmart" each other in the seventh inning of yesterday's game, when, with Joe Judge on second, Frank "Blackie" O'Rourke tried to pull the moss-covered hidden ball trick. He fooled no one but himself.

Nationals, Despite Showing, Have Been Playing With Heads Up.

While the Nationals have won few games this season and have been particularly disappointing in view of the form they showed during the exhibition season, they must be credited with one thing—keeping their heads up and not quitting. True they have played some poor baseball on occasions, but, as a rule, they have been in the running in most games and have suffered enough bad "breaks" to make the average team collapse.

Johnson's athletes, however, are still

Hayes Bunts Stewart Home After Cronin Slams Double.

St. Louis Gets 5 Hits; Blaeholder Weakens Near End.

By FRANK P. YOUNG.

EVIDENTLY believing that "one good 'squeeze' deserves another," the Nationals, who were beaten in the ninth inning Saturday on a St. Louis "squeeze" play, used the same medium yesterday to score a last-frame 2-to-1 victory over the Browns. This triumph, coupled with a loss by the White Sox, puts the Capital Citizens in sixth place in the race.

Jack Hayes was the man behind the gun when the play, perfectly executed, was put on with the whole St. Louis team knowing what was coming. With the score tied, Joe Cronin opened the home ninth with a lusty double down the left field foul-line, and Judge immediately sacrificed him to third. Here, Manager Johnson decided to put the speedy Studs Stewart on the base in Cronin's place while the entire alien infield and Manager Dan Howley gathered in the pitcher's box in conference.

With the infield playing in, Hayes let one ball pass him, but, on Pitcher George Blaeholder's second delivery, Stewart broke for home and was there so quickly that no play could be made on him on Hayes' great bunt. Blaeholder, who fielded it, was slow making the play to first, and so Hayes was credited with a hit, giving him three for the day and stick honors for the Nationals.

It was another well-played game, with enough base action to keep the 12,000 fans interested throughout despite the fact that both pitchers were performing in fine style. Irving Hadley, for the Nats, granted but five hits, walked two and struck out six.

Hadley Pitches Well to Hold Browns Scoreless After First.

The only alien run of the game came in the very first frame, just the reverse from the Nat attack on Blaeholder, who pitched shutout ball for the first seven innings, only to see the game slip from his grasp at the finish. He allowed but eight hits and kept them widely separated, while issuing but two passes.

Hadley pitched one of his best games of the year. After fanning Blue to start the game, McGowan tripled and scored on O'Rourke's helpful out. Schulte followed with a single, and, except for a walk issued in the third, no more Browns saw base-life until the fifth, which has been a "star" frame for the Nat pitcher in most of his previous 1929 starts.

Melillo pried the top off of this one with a one-shot off Hadley's glove and the Nats began worrying when Kress coaxed a walk. Blaeholder obliged by fanning, however, and the Cronin-Hayes-Judge combination pulled the pitcher out of the hole by turning Blue's roller into a twin murder.

SEASON'S OUTSTANDING 3-YEAR-OLD NOT DETERMINED

Rich Belmont Stake May Decide

Representative Field in Saturday's Race Is Assured.

Winner May Not Be Accepted as Best in His Class.

Special to The Washington Post.

BELMONT PARK, N. Y., June 2.—With ten to fifteen well-matched horses competing, the sixty-first Belmont set for next Saturday promises to be the most interesting race in the history of a special that was instituted in 1867 and boasts traditions as appealing as any horse race of annual revival anywhere in the world enjoys. And the sixty-first Belmont will be the richest or nearly that gallop for 3-year-olds exclusively that will be run anywhere in the world this season.

Grossing $75,000 to $80,000, according to the number of starters, it will pay its winner $63,000 to $66,000, the second horse $7,500, the third $3,000 and the fourth $1,000. There will be a splendid piece of plate for the winner, a contribution of Mrs. August Belmont, widow of the first president of the Westchester Racing Association, under whose auspices the Belmonts have been revived since 1890 and for whose father, the first August Belmont, the race was named.

Whether Winner to Be Considered Champion Remains to Be Seen

Whether the impending race is to be won by a horse coming generations will accept as such a champion as Harry Bassett, Duke of Magenta, Inspector B., Hanover, Sir Dicon, Henry of Navarre, Bowling Brook, Commando, Africander, Burgomaster, Peter Pan, Colin, Hourless, Sir Barton, Man o' War, Grey Lag and Crusader each was in his time, or as good as Chance Shot and Vito, the last two winners were a couple of seasons back and last season, is problematical. But there are big possibilities in the prospective field.

Fairly certain starters are Blue Larkspur, Jack High, Chestnut Oak, Dr. Freeland, Sunvir, African, Dall, Vermajo, Panchio, The Nut, Marine, Beacon Hill, Holiday, Chicatie and Sun Hatter, and there are others in the offing. There is no standout 3-year-old this season such as Sir Barton, which won a Kentucky Derby, a Withers and a Preakness before coming to the fifty-first Belmont was in the spring of 1919, or Man o' War, which had taken a Preakness and a Withers the following spring, looked on the eve of the running of the fifty-second.

Jack High and Blue Larkspur Brilliant as 2-Year-Olds.

Jack High and Blue Larkspur were two of the most successful of last season's 2-year-olds, but there were eight or ten other first-fighters. One of these was that dazzling little speed hound Chestnut Oak, Virginia-bred son of Apprehension and Bantry Pass, which the late Thomas Fortune Ryan bred at his Oakridge stud at the foot of the Blue Ridge. Dr. Freeland, a second-string 2-year-old, has improved into a better 3-year-old, as he demonstrated at Pimlico three weeks ago by winning a Preakness. African, son of Olambala and Grace Foster, that was little heard of last season, was crowding Dr. Freeland hard at the finish of the Preakness.

Sunvir, son of Sun Briar and Olga Virginia, hailing from the Valley of Virginia and the same stud that gave racing last season splendid 3-year-olds in Reigh Count, the chance of Sun Beau, one of the chief pretenders to the championship, was slow coming to hand, but revealed plenty of stuff in Maryland last November and has shown a fine brand of speed at Belmont Park this spring.

Vermajo, son of Peter Pan, Belmont winner of 1907, won a New Orleans handicap and about $40,000 last winter, and The Nut, a son of that famous old distance runner Mad Hatter, son of Fair Play, the contender behind Colin in the Belmont of 1908, has been doing fine things in this spring's racing.

Man o' War, Fair Play's greatest son, which, besides winning the Belmont of 1920, has fathered American Flag and Crusader, the winners of 1925 and 1926, will be represented in the sixty-first by Marine, a product of Joseph E. Widener's Elmendorf stud.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY HENRY P. COLLYER

TRAYMORE!

Hop over to your favorite corner store and plant a couple of megs on the beezer of this sprinter in the second race. I have the assurance from the big chief at Washington Park, where this trick performs today, that there will be no slip in the arrangements. GEORGE GROOM and BILL SETH for what is left.

I have another real pickler at the same track and it is none other than VIMONT in the sixth spasm. That last effort was a trifle better than the dope would indicate. In the third, the lads with the tick-tocks shoot me TYROL to beat SIXTY. Could not have done any better myself. Jimmy Moran, I understand, goes right back in the fourth. KHARA is improving and may be dangerous.

KING NADI looks like a kick in the slats in the fifth. No more comment is necessary.

Over at Fairmount, where the gewgaws are performing to form, the standout appears to be PARNELL BOUND in the fifth event. This was a whale of a 2-year old in the gooey stuff around New Orleans early in the year. TANNERY also performed like a good one at Miami. With every indication of a heavy track at this writing, I also look for HESITATION to bring home the bacon in the sixth race. ESSIE, an overdue good thing of the day before, is stripped for action in the third, and I don't think the contest will be even close.

The boys at Thorncliffe are sweet on H. G. Bedwells MAC MAXIM in the fourth. That last effort ought to make him win here. PONDY is likely to be close up. Look out for STORM KING in the third. The chart makers say he quit to a walk. Must have got frightened at a bug on the fence. Well, this is another day, and maybe a new deal.

Out at Belmont my chief track man wires me JACK HIGH will redeem himself in the third for the defeat he suffered by Blue Larkspur and Chestnut Oak in the Withers. He also wised me to the fact that there will be quite a play on BRADLEY'S PEGGY to beat the good and consistent filly, LACE, in the fourth. You have the info for what it is worth.

Saints Defeat Browns in 9th, 2-1

In the sixth the Browns benefited from a single and triple, but failed to use either blow for the simple reason that Manush died stealing following his single, so that there were two dead and none on when Schulte, next up, tripled to right-center. This was the visitors' last chance, for they were retired in order in the next three frames.

Blaeholder Never in Danger Until the Late Innings.

Blaeholder was equally effective against the Nats and never was in hot water until the seventh. Goslin tripled with two dead in the first and was left, while his double and another by Hayes, in the fourth and fifth, respectively, were marked "no good" by their mates.

The St. Louis moundsman showed his first signs of weakening in the next round, but managed to escape unscathed, despite singles by Cronin and Hayes. He was not so fortunate in the next two frames, however. He issued a second pass to Myer starting the eighth, and Buddy showed rare speed afoot in scoring on Rice's double through Kress, which followed. A double play nipped this rally in its infancy and, just as the fans were settling back in their seats for an over-time game, Cronin started the onslaught in the final round, which broke up the game.

Cronin, who brought his consecutive game-hitting streak to 18, and Goslin shared Nat stick honors with Hayes, getting two hits apiece. Both of Goslin's were extra-basers, while Schulte was the only Brownie able to get more than one safety off of Hadley's offerings. Sam Rice's catch of Blue's liner almost to the score board in round 8 was the fielding feature of the game.

WHILE the Brentwood Hawks were defeating the Dixie Pig A. C., 10 to 2, in what was booked as the feature game of the Capital City League unlimited section yesterday, the Auth and Capitol A. C. nines were staging a hard fought 1 to 0 battle at Bladensburg. The Authmen turned in their third straight win but only after one of the most gruelling engagements they have ever experienced in league competition.

The Hawk victory over the Dixie Pigs was rather decisive. The winners retained their undefeated record, while their victims were suffering the first setback of the season.

Edmonds Art Stone Co. tossers broke into the win column with a close decision over the Tremonts, 7 to 6. The National Press Building Cardinals counted six runs in the ninth to defeat the Browns Corner Nine, which was seen for the first time, 11 to 7.

Ensor and Wanley Heroes Of Brentwood's Triumph.

Tack Ensor and Johnny Wanly were heroes of the Hawk triumph. Ensor held the Pigs to four hits while his mates were touching Adair, Gasch and Chase for eleven. Wanly not only fielded sensationally but collected three hits including a home run. Reid had a pair of doubles.

Dick Keefer practically gave the Auths their narrow margin of victory when he doubled in the sixth, stole third and counted on Rupert's sacrifice fly to center. In the ninth, he brought down a long drive in the outfield which would have enabled the Capitols to tie the score had the ball fallen safely.

Brown and Wade collected three hits apiece for the Capitols. Rhodes held the losers to seven hits and fanned thirteen, while his opponent, Collow, was touched for eight hits, fanned six and issued the lone base on balls.

Browns Corner Club Makes Strong Bid for Victory.

The Browns Corner Nine made a bid for victory in the fourth when five runs were counted and Owen was chased in favor of Young. The latter gave but two hits the remainder of the game. The Cards made their big splurge in the last session, clinching the verdict with a six-run rally. Goodman pitched steadily for the losers. His support was not of the best. The Durvee brothers, Schneider and Cohn each hit for the circuit on the West Ellipse diamond.

McDonald's single in the ninth sent over two runs to give the Edmonds Nine its first victory. Bladen and Dean hurled for the losers, the former weakening in the eigth when the visitors chalked up two runs. Lindsey and Willmer each obtained three hits and A. Stewart sparkled afield.

HISER STARS IN VICTORY.

Henry Hiser was the hero as the Hiser's All-Stars defeated the Canton Community Club of Baltimore yesterday in a double-header at Riverdale, 8 to 2 and 8 to 7. Coming to bat with his team in the midst of a five-run rally and two runs behind, Hiser hit a home run in the last inning of the second game for victory. The first game was won easily without Hiser's help.

The Georgetown Insects continued their undefeated march in the Capital City League by turning back the previously undefeated Sam Wests, 6 to 5, in a spirited battle. Lomax was the big gun for the winners, not only pitching good ball but also contributing timely hits that brought him victory. His single to right, scoring two men, proved the deciding punch of the contest.

The Return Of OLD KING BRADY

Revived by MERLE W. HERSEY

(Copyright Protected Reproduction in Whole or in Part Prohibited.)

The Bradys start for Spanish Licks, Kans., in answer to an appeal from the mayor to help find their marshal, who has mysteriously disappeared. En route on horseback over an inland trail they encounter a ghostly band of riders, "The Deadmen of Deadman's Island."

CHAPTER V.

The Night Trail on the Prairie.

We left Old King Brady and Dr. Doniphan lying in the grass watching Marshal Mundy as he walked under the trees on Deadman's Island.

In a moment the marshal disappeared among the trees without having looked in their direction once. The doctor was for getting up then, but Old King Brady checked him, "Wait! There go two more—no three. Look! There is Harry!"

"Yes, it's your partner, all right," said the doctor. "One must be Chris Butts, judging from his size. But who is the other young fellow?"

"Dick Halsted—the young fellow who claimed to be the marshal's nephew."

They watched the three until they were out of sight. Then Old King Brady arose and said, "There is no use hanging around here, doctor. Let's get back to the horses. We can see this place with our glass and be on the alert."

Not until they reached the hollow where they left their horses did the old detective speak again.

"What we want to do is to get into the marshal's game. He has probably discovered the treasure and plans to get away with it as soon as he can."

"I agree with you," said the doctor.

For hours the old detectives lay there at the edge of the hollow and watched Deadman's Island. Wearied out at last Doctor Doniphan relieved him, and thus they kept watch until night came on.

As it was no longer possible to continue their work from this distance they rode to a nearer point. Here the younger man was left in charge of the horses while Old King Brady went forward, taking his station near the end of the trail.

Shortly after 10 o'clock four men suddenly emerged from the cottonwoods and proceeded to lay the bridge as before. Old King Brady rushed back to his partner.

"Ready!" he said. "It's a good thing it is a dark night for we could never hope to shadow them if the stars were out. We must disguise ourselves for we may have to mingle with these men before we finish."

When the work was over Dr. Doniphan looked like a cowboy, while Old King Brady, with a long, white beard, eyeglasses and false diamond pin, might have been taken for some wealthy ranch owner.

While these preparations were going on they kept a sharp ear to every sound. They soon heard the footfall of the horses on the bridge. They mounted and were soon under way.

In spite of the darkness they could make out the party which had crossed from the island. There were three men and a woman. Old King Brady felt certain one of them was Harry. They kept at a safe distance, but never let the party get out of sight.

Dr. Doniphan was sure the party was heading for the railroad. But at last, toward 3 o'clock, a change came.

"We are in for it now," said the doctor. "There's a big storm coming up." A moment later a flash of lightning cut across the sky, followed by a sharp thunderclap. "There they go!" he cried. "They have sheered to the left."

Another flash of lightning showed them a brick building of some size standing alone on the prairie, with a small house nearby, toward which the party was making with all speed.

"Ah!" said the doctor. "I know now where we are. This is the old Wentworth place. I didn't suppose we were within miles of it." He then informed Old King Brady that the place was a deserted ranch, long since abandoned.

To this place the party was evidently heading, and thanks to a friendly flash of lightning, they could be seen tying up there.

The rain was now close at hand and the detective determined to join these people and take his chances. As they came up to the buildings the rain came down in torrents.

"Make for the barn!" cried the doctor; they had already agreed upon the names they would pass under.

"Halt! Who goes there?" a stern voice demanded, as they neared the barn, and a man armed with a rifle appeared in the doorway. It was Marshal Mundy. Behind him stood Dick Halsted, holding a lantern.

Marshal Mundy Outwitted.

"Oh, let them come," said a woman's voice. "They'll be drowned out there in the rain."

The woman was seen looking over Dick Halsted's shoulder, and to Old King Brady's intense relief Harry came into view. All stood aside and let the two men ride through the big door and dismount.

Marshal Mundy looked his disapproval. Something had to be said.

"It's a bad storm," remarked Old King Brady, at the same time giving Harry a secret sign. "We've been trying all night to find a ranch where we could tie up. Do you own this place, sir?"

"No, I don't own it. We are travelers like you, seeking shelter from the storm."

"I judged that by seeing your horses. But I fear we are intruding. We'll leave the moment the rain holds up."

"That's your business," growled the marshal. "Tie your horses and just mind your own business and leave us to mind ours."

Old King Brady made the horses fast and withdrew to a distant corner of the barn with the doctor. "Queer sort," breathed the young man.

"Very, but it's all right," replied the old detective. "Be extremely cautious. I think we had better do no talking."

A few moments later Harry went over to the house and when he returned all hands followed him back again through the rain.

"Thank heavens, they have gone!" exclaimed the doctor. "Do you know that woman?"

"She's not a person to know," said the detective, gravely, "and I never saw her before. Treachery is written all over her face."

"Who is the young fellow with your partner? Dick Halsted?"

"Yes," replied Old King Brady. "Harry will be coming back in a few minutes. You will be surprised when I tell you that they found the gold; that they are now on their way to arrange for its transportation out of the country; that the marshal is a crook standing in with the gang."

"How in the world did you find out all this?" asked the doctor in amazement.

"Not a word—but many secret signs."

An hour passed. Young King Brady then appeared at the back door of the ranch and came gliding out. He went around back of the barn, entered, and as he passed the old detective said hurriedly: "Keep as you are. I am being watched. I just came to see that the horss are all right." He went on to the horses and as he came back said in a low tone. "We are bound for a place called Munjoy. Cut away from us and steer for Munjoy. You are bound to strike us there."

Old King Brady accordingly roused the doctor. The rain had stopped and they saddled their horses and rode away. Marshal Mundy watched them from the door of the old house.

"Say, Brady," called the marshal, preparing to take a nap, "you keep a watch out. I shan't sleep more than half an hour. Then we'll move on."

"All right," replied Harry. "I guess I'll watch outside."

He had taken two or three turns when he heard his name called in a low voice. Julie was leaning out of the window.

"Brady," she whispered, "Is the marshal asleep?"

"I believe he is," replied Harry.

"I'm coming down—I've a proposition to put up to you." Julie descended, much to Harry's disgust, for women can upset the best of plans.

"All right, what is it?" he said patiently.

"I want to give Chris the shake forever," she replied. "I want to get a divorce and marry again. Suppose you help me sneak some of this gold onto a Western train and go to Frisco with me? You can arrange to run all the gold West to Denver instead of East to Kansas City, as Chris has arranged."

"I think I see. I'll begin saddling the horses while you take a look at the sleepers."

A few minutes later he and Mrs. Butts rode away, each with a led horse, leaving Marshal Mundy and Dick Halstead to get to Munjoy as best they could.

The plan was for the gang to go direct to Munjoy with the gold, where the marshal was to have everything in readiness for them.

ELLA CINDERS—The Servant Queen — By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

MY THEATRICAL MANAGER TOLD JIM BLUNT HE WON'T STAND IN THE WAY OF MY HAPPINESS! HE'LL RELEASE ME FROM MY STAGE CONTRACT, SO I CAN GET MARRIED IF I PERSONALLY INSIST!
WELL, I'LL INSIST! IF I WAIT MUCH LONGER MY WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT WILL READ: AGED PAIR PLIGHT TROTH! OR CENTENARIANS HOBBLE TO ALTAR!
MR. BLACK, I'VE DECIDED TO GIVE UP THE STAGE AND PLAY LEADING LADY FOR ONE MAN THE REST OF MY LIFE!
ALL RIGHT, ELLA, BUT—
—LOOK AT THE THOUSANDS OF LETTERS FROM YOUR ADMIRERS! IF YOU MARRY JIM, YOU MAKE ONE HAPPY! IF YOU KEEP YOUR CAREER, YOU MAKE THOUSANDS HAPPY! AN ACTRESS MAY REIGN LIKE A QUEEN, BUT SHE IS STILL A SERVANT TO HER PUBLIC!
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off., Copyright 1929, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service
This puts a new light on the subject. Does Ella really owe a duty to her public?

GASOLINE ALLEY — Solitude at Last

THE SIGNS ALL SHOW IT. THERE IS SOME NEW REASON MME. OCTAVE WANTS TO GET HER HANDS ON SKEEZIX AT THIS TIME.
UNCLE WALT, WHAT'S BLACK AN' WHITE AN' RED ALL OVER? NEWSPAPER! DO YOU GET IT?
SHE'S MAKING A NEW TRY, WITH A NEW ATTORNEY TO DO HER DIRTY WORK. BUT IT CAN'T BE A LEGAL MATTER. THAT'S ALL SETTLED IN MY FAVOR.
SHE HASN'T THE NERVE TO TRY FOR SKEEZIX PERMANENTLY AGAIN SO SHE WANTS HIM LONG ENOUGH TO SEND HIM TO SCHOOL IN PARIS. I'VE GOT TO THINK THIS THING OUT. IF I COULD ONLY BE OFF BY MYSELF FOR A WHILE!
IF YOU CAN'T GET UP INTO THE NORTH WOODS THIS IS THE ONLY PLACE YOU CAN BE ALONE!

HEROISM IS NEEDED, DR. L. C. CLARK TELLS AMERICAN U. CLASS

Locomotion Changes Rapidly, but Courting Is Same, Says Chancellor.

GRADUATES PRESENT FLAGPOLE TO COLLEGE

Nation May Conquer Mankind and Be Slain by Flies, Speaker Suggests.

A call for "heroism on the modern frontiers" of education, science, transportation, health, international relations, and spiritual affairs was sounded by Dr. Lucius C. Clark, chancellor of American University, in his annual convocation sermon yesterday to the graduating classes of the institution in the gymnasium auditorium.

Prior to the sermon, the senior class of the College of Liberal Arts presented to the college a steel flagpole, 60 feet high, and raised the American flag with appropriate ceremonies. Commencement exercises will be held tonight at the gymnasium auditorium, at 8 o'clock, when Dr. Walter M. W. Splawn, new dean of the Graduate School and the School of Political Sciences of American University, will deliver the address. He will speak on the "Development of Higher Education in the United States."

Dr. Clark in his sermon declared this "has undoubtedly been a great generation of transportation. The single item of transportation," he said, "may have reached its peak in a quarter of a century. It may be we are only well begun.

All Changes But Love.

"In the courting days of your great grandfather, his method of locomotion was walking," said the speaker. "Your grandfather rode a horse. Your father went in a carriage. Some of you began on a bicycle and others of you now rush by in an automobile. Your son undoubtedly will go in an aeroplane. His son will have some kind of a helicopter which he will fasten with a belt about his dress suit, will touch a spring and be shot into the air for 100 feet. The wings will then open and across the town he will go with a coattail as a rudder and a front button for a compass; down he will land at the front door, fold his beautiful wings, park the whole thing in an umbrella rack in the front hall, and there you are! The only constant factor in the whole matter is that love making goes on in much the same old way.

"So many remarkable advances have been made in science in the life of those present," continued the chancellor, "that many students wonder if anything could be left for them to do, or to discover, in the material world. We are only, however, at the frontiers of our material needs. We are just on the frontiers of the problems of health. Serious-minded men today are asking the question, 'Will insects starve us?' It would be a pity, if in our great confidence we would marshal forces to fight a world and conquer human kind, and could not master the battle forces of the Gypsy moth, the Japanese beetle, the boll weevil, or the Mediterranean fruit fly. Napoleon was defeated by a snowflake. We may go down under an avalanche of flies."

Some modern inventions, however, Dr. Clark charged with being part of a "movement in the nature of a passive resistance to knowledge." "I have a conviction," he said, "that with the radio, movies, movietone and television, your task as educators is made the more difficult, and you, too, have new frontiers and new undiscovered continents before you.

Heroism Needed Today.

"The frontiers of international relations zig-zag across the world. It is all uncharted. Every living man and woman of us is a frontiersman. The heroism of the fathers who waged ceaseless contest with the necessity of our country's development, must now be matched by an equal heroism on the part of our sons and daughters to protect and maintain that which was secure at such great cost.

"The largest possible contribution for the future," declared Dr. Clark, "is in the hands of devoted and effective men and women who know how to be religious and not fanatical; who know how to be spiritual and not spoiled—in brief, who know how to live a life that somebody else would love to parallel."

The flagpole and flag were presented by Roland Rice, president of the senior class of the college, and were received on behalf of the trustees of the institution by Dr. A. C. Christie. The flag, Dr. Christie said, not only symbolized the opportunities granted by a free government, but also the responsibilities that citizens, educators and scholars owe that government.

A college bugler, Ronald McLaughlin, sounded "To the Color." The flag ceremonies took place in a hollow square bounded by faculty and graduates in cap and gown.

The college orchestra, under direction of Dr. C. Henri Leineweber, and the college quartet, consisting of Leon K. Bryner, Barrett Fuchs, Ronald McLaughlin, and J. Harold Riggle, furnished music. Scripture lesson and prayer were by the Rev. Philip C. Edwards, pastor of University Heights Church.

URGES HEROISM

DR. L. C. CLARK.

HOWARD GRADUATES URGED TO AID RACE

Dr. M. W. Johnson, President, Delivers Baccalaureate Address at Rites.

GREED AND CYNICISM HIT

The baccalaureate address at Howard University yesterday was delivered by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, recently awarded the Spingarn medal for 1928 for the highest achievement of an American negro during the year. Approximately 2,000 persons gained entrance to the gymnasium-armory auditorium, while many others were turned away. A procession of deans, faculty and academic and professional students preceded the exercises. The invocation was said by the Rev. Samuel Judson Porter, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

Dr. Johnson called attention to the membership of 800,000 in white colleges, 50 times the negro collegiate enrollment, as evidence of a greater proportionate need for highly trained colored men and women. He advised the graduating classes to allow no sophistication to lead them to believe that the negro is better off than he actually is—"economically helpless in America, unable to manufacture and sell to others or to himself, and for the most part living in a civil state existing by violence which cuts him off from the power that is his."

"The negro in America," Dr. Johnson said, "like the masses of all other people today, needs a leadership which is anxious to have him realize his fullest possibilities. The greatest need of the Nation is not men in power to control the people who enforce the law, but men in service of the Government who love the people and set the example of law observance. The danger confronting the Nation is not petty crime, but enormous and far-sighted greed of men of superior intellect, who in order to satisfy this greed and make themselves and their families secure forever, would throttle and choke and keep the people down."

"In decrying "armchair philosophers and occasional thinkers," Dr. Johnson stated: "It is just as impossible for Nietsche or Mencken to tell what will come out of a life of love of common people as it is for a farmer to tell what will come out of the beakers of experimental chemistry if he puts the materials they contain together."

Musical numbers were furnished by the university choir, directed by Miss L. V. Childers and by Lester Dorsey, tenor. The benediction was given by the Rev. Ernest C. Smith.

79 Trinity Seniors Present at Mass

Graduating Class Will Be Awarded Diplomas Tomorrow Morning.

Members of the 1929 graduating class of Trinity College, 79 in all, yesterday attended solemn pontifical mass in the Notre Dame Chapel of the school, during which the baccalaureate sermon was preached by the Rev. Thomas V. Moore, O. S. B.

The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, D. D., Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, was the celebrant of the mass, while the Very Rev. John F. Fenlon, S. S., S. T. D., was assistant priest. Deacons of the mass were the Rev. Richard S. Cartwright, C. S. P. and the Rev. Edward B. Jordan, S. T. D. The Rev. Joseph M. Nelligan was master of ceremonies.

Members of the class wore caps and gowns for the service yesterday morning. In the evening a serenade was held on the courts in front of the school. Class day exercises will be held this afternoon, with conferring of degrees scheduled for tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Woman Held in $250 Watch Theft.

Ines Balock, colored, of 325 G street northwest, was arrested yesterday and charged with grand larceny in connection with the theft of a $250 wrist watch from Mrs. Rose Shepard, of 1309 Seventeenth street northwest, her employer. Detectives reported that the watch was found in the colored woman's possession.

MASONS ARE URGED AS POSSIBLE MEANS FOR WORLD PEACE

Senator Shortridge Declares Brotherhood Could Aid Movement Greatly.

METHODISTS OBSERVE CHURCH CENTENNIAL

Members of Congress Street Institution Celebrate With Program.

A new approach to the establishment of inviolate world peace was advocated by Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, of California, himself a Mason, when he urged that peace be brought about by the brotherhood of Masonry throughout the world in his address celebrating the centennial of the Congress Street Methodist Protestant Church at Georgetown last night.

Senator Shortridge, after reviewing the history of Masonry from the time its members were Crusaders for the Holy Sacrament and always, in all countries, disciples of Christianity, said that the promotion of genuine brotherhood between all peoples, such as the Masons practice, would remove the ground for the planting of even causes for war.

He commented on the far-flung lines of Masonry in all parts of the world, in all countries, and urged that Masons take up the promotion of such friendliness and brotherhood in their respective countries.

"Masonry has always advocated brotherhood," he said. "It has always been a disciple of Christianity, and it is our work to carry this ideal and practice of brotherhood to all people."

St. Paul Is Quoted.

He quoted St. Paul to the effect that all men are blood brothers.

"We are blood brothers, divided now into different nations, but none the less blood brothers, and the fact of our different nationalities makes us no less obliged to each other to act as blood brothers."

The institution of the world-wide promotion of brotherhood, Senator Shortridge said, will do more to establish inviolate world peace than all the peace pacts and treaties that men can write.

In the course of his address he paid tribute to labor, particularly the labor of the hands, reminding that the Masons in the beginning were actually working masons with stone and trowel.

Senator Shortridge is a member of the Excelsior Lodge, F. A. A. M.; California Commandery, K. T.; Islam Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

Potomac Lodge, No. 5, F. A. A. M., attended the service in uniform. This lodge assisted in the laying of the corner stone of the church a hundred years ago yesterday.

Greetings Are Extended.

The service opened with an organ prelude, "Andante," followed by hymn 393. Invocation was said by the Rev. George Hines. After offertory and an anthem an address of welcome was made by W. H. Harrison, chairman of the executive committee, and greetings were extended by Most Worshipful Grand Master Wisdom Brown, grand master of Masons of the District of Columbia.

The Washington gavel, used by George Washington when laying the corner stone of the United States Capitol, and also for laying the corner stone of the Congress Street Church, was exhibited, as was a record of the corner stone laying by Worshipful Master John E. Chrisman, of the Potomac Lodge.

The members of this church, following the separation from the Methodist Episcopal Church, met and organized themselves into "a church or churches denominated Associated Methodist Churches in opposition to and distinct from the Methodist Episcopal Church," in 1828.

Their protest was against "the administration of this church (Methodist Episcopal) and the feeling manifested by some of its members toward those who have been honestly seeking a modification in its government with the sole view of promoting its interests."

Resolution Is Adopted.

Having withdrawn from the church, the little group met on December 2, 1828, and "Resolved that the conventional articles adopted at the late convention of reformers held in the City of Baltimore is hereby declared to be the ground of our union with the Associated Methodist Church."

On June 2, 1829, the corner stone was laid on the present site, now Thirty-first street, and was known as "The Congress Street Meeting House." The original building still stands, though remodeled and finished as a modern church.

A solo was given by H. G. McCartney. Benediction was by the Rev. H. A. Kester, S. T. D., pastor.

Workman Hurt in Fall.

William Bailey, colored, 42 years old, 522C Cloud Place northeast, a workman employed by the Pietroski & Konoys construction corporation was seriously injured yesterday when he fell from a scaffold while working on a project at 100 C street northwest. He was taken to Emergency hospital in an ambulance. Physicans there believe that his spine was fractured in the fall.

Soldier Takes Equipment Periling War Maneuver

A buck private in the United States Army who ran away with an Army truck loaded with tools, tires and equipment yesterday threatened to disrupt plans for Army War College tactical maneuvers at Fort Dupont, Del., on Monday, officials of the War College informed police last night, asking police to help locate the truck.

Lieut. E. H. Young, U. S. A., attached to Washington Barracks, reported the theft of the truck to police. The truck was one of several machines which had been brought from Camp Holabird, Md., en route to the Fort Dupont maneuvers. It was taken from the Washington Barracks by Private De Barker, attached to Camp Holabird. Police are looking for the man and the truck, valued at several thousand dollars, and its load of equipment. The maneuvers will be directed by student officers who are assigned to the Army War College for instruction.

FAMILY OF 4 HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

GRANDMOTHER IS UNHURT

One woman was seriously injured, her husband and two children suffered less serious injuries and her 80-year-old mother escaped unhurt in a collision of two automobiles at Connecticut avenue and Calvert street northwest at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hill, 50 years old, 1917 S street northwest is in Emergency Hospital suffering severe lacerations of the scalp and face, broken ribs, and doctors fear she may have a fractured skull. Her husband, Ambrose P. Hill, is also confined there with a fractured knee, while their two children, Mildred, 10 years old, and Leon, 8 years old, were sent home after being treated for bruises and contusions. Mrs. Winifred Paramore, 80 years old, mother of Mrs. Hill, suffered only from shock.

The five persons were riding south on Connecticut avenue, according to witnesses, when Mr. Hill, who was driving, made a left turn to enter Calvert street. The Hill's machine collided with that of Miller B. Stevinson, of the Jefferson Apartments, Sixteenth and M streets northwest, who was driving north on Connecticut avenue.

Stevinson, who is well known in sport circles of Washington as an amateur golfer, was uninjured and his car only slightly damaged, whereas the Hills machine was almost demolished. Stevinson rendered first aid to the injured woman and her children and summoned Emergency Hospital ambulance. Dr. Leon Rutkowski, who treated the victims of the accident, said Mrs. Hill would probably live.

Motorcycle Policeman J. T. White, of the Fourteenth Precinct, arrived soon after the crash and straightened out a considerable traffic jam which resulted when motorists stopped to investigate the accident.

After a preliminary investigation White said the accident may have been caused by Mr. Hill's unfamiliarity with the system of making left turns where there are traffic lights, as there are at this intersection. It was believed Hill started to make the turn as it is supposed to be made at unlighted intersections. The Hills moved to Washington from Virginia about two weeks ago.

Stevenson was not held after making a report of the accident to Policeman White.

Mabel Jones' Pupils Give Dance Recital

Doll, Interpretive and Ballet Numbers Are Appreciated.

An appreciative audience at the Belasco Theater Friday night viewed the third classic dance recital of Mabel Jones, colored Vestoff-Serova postgraduate, and her talented pupils. The program was arranged in three parts to include character doll dances, interpretive numbers in a gypsy camp setting, and ballet numbers.

The dolls included Violet Warfield, Marie Dixon, Lucy Scott, Mercedes Murray, Vernell Fife, Meda Lewis, Therell Smith, Jane Martin, Camille Cottrell, Evelyn Arnold, Harryet Pelham, Hazel Dowling, Harriet Fisher, Camille Lewis, Martha Anne Lofton, Jean Clifford and Elaine Arnold.

The interpretive numbers presented several members of this initial group and Lois Hellman, Nadine Lewis, Mabel Jones, Doris Carter, Ruth Matthews, Hilda Lawson, Claribel Hughes, Rosalie Reid and Augusta Lomack. A solo vocal number was rendered also by Estelle Pinckney.

7 Companies Fight Blaze at Rosslyn

Calls to Other Towns Are Sent; Damage Held at $1,000.

Firemen from seven Virginia villages were called yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock to combat a fire of undetermined origin which damaged the home of Mrs. Annie Hoffman, Rosslyn, Va., to the extent of $1,000.

Calls to Cherrydale, Halls Hill, Ballston, Clarendon, Arlington, Virginia Highlands and Potomac fire companies were sent out because the house, a two-story frame structure, is close to the oil and gasoline companies of Rosslyn.

Flames were discovered shooting from the kitchen window of the house and the interior was ruined by the blaze. Firemen were forced to lay 1,000 feet of hose to reach the fire. Traffic on the Francis Scott Key bridge was congested as crowds gathered to watch the firemen at work.

BISHOP CONFIRMS BIG CLASS; CALLS FAITH PARAMOUNT

PARENT-TEACHERS' NEED TO GUIDE YOUTH IS CITED

Commends Rector on Growth of Parish After Sermon Analyzing Success.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, administered confirmation and preached to a large congregation yesterday morning at the service in the Church of the Transfiguration, Gallatin and Fourteenth streets northwest.

After the confirmation exercises, Bishop Freeman commended the Rev. John J. Queally, the rector, on the size of the class and the growth of the parish. He took as his text a passage from the Epistle of St. John: "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Who is He that overcometh the world?"

Parent-Teachers Cited.

"When the Parent-Teachers of America met recently their greatest problem was to give to the tens of thousands of young men and women who are pouring out of the schools something definite to use in the struggle with the present day influences of the world," said the bishop. "It is faith, and not wealth and power and luxury that will effect this victory.

"The great war President, Woodrow Wilson, in his struggle to overcome the influences that brought distress to his last days had recourse to the faith that overcome the world. The Savior of Mankind, Himself in the shadow of the cross, turned to His disciples and said: 'Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.'

Faith Held Paramount.

"So those confirmed here today may receive many gifts, but, no one can doubt, the greatest help they will ever have will be from that faith in which they are now confirmed."

Third Assistant Attorney General Herman J. Galloway was among those confirmed.

Brakeman Badly Hurt In Pennsylvania Yard

Frank Fetters, 34 years old, a roomer at 223 East Capitol street northeast, employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad as brakeman, was injured early last night in the Pennsylvania avenue yards when, according to police, his head was struck by a passing railway car while he was engaged in shifting cars.

Fetters was taken to Emergency Hospital in an ambulance. He was treated there for scalp wounds, and physicians there believe his skull was fractured in the accident. Officials at the yards said Fetters was removing a block from underneath the wheels of a car at the time of the accident.

"THE LAST WARNING." A Universel sound adaptation of Thomas F. Fallon's famous play based on "The House of Fear," by Wadsworth Camp. Featuring Laura La Plante, John Boles and Montagu Love. Directed by Paul Leni. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Too often when a mystery play is filmed, either from an original script or from a stage success, the air of spookiness is added for no other reason than to act as a refrigerant for the backbone, but in "The Last Warning" such eeriness is not only justified but actually indispensable to the proper appreciation of the efforts of a theatrical company to reopen "The Snare," a drama which cost the leading man his life.

In a theater close for many years following the murder and the mysterious disappearance of the body of John Woodford, a reunited "original" company essays the task of reviving the ill-fated drama. In rehearsal Carlton, the second leading man, is murdered and disappears under conditions identical with those of the original tragedy. Quaile, the stage director and formerly suspected of being implicated in Woodford's murder but since exonerated, takes the role and the play goes into the opening night, but not without very mysterious happenings attendant upon the rehearsals. As the new producer, who is probably more of a detective on the trail of Woodford's murderer than he is a theater man, McHugh sets the stage with alarming cleverness, and when the first act opens an atempted murder takes place under the same conditions as the other two but——. There's the denouement, and how!

The long cast of characters—headed by Laura LaPlante, as Doris Terry, the leading lady; John Boles, as Quaile, the third leading man, and Montague Love, as McHugh, under whose guidance the mystery is solved—are well selected for their respective roles. Roy D'Arcy, as Carlton; Bert Roach, as Mike Brody, a stage hand; Mack Swain and Burr McIntosh, as the Bunch brothers, the owners of the theater; Carry Daumery, as Barbara, the hatchet-faced source of the many screams; D'Arcy Corrigan, as John Woodford, whose death caused the whole rumpus; Margaret Livingston, as Evalinda, a detective assistant, and Fred Kelsey and Tom O'Brien, as police inspectors, complete the capable cast.

Opening with about two reels of dialogue, the picture lapses into silence except for a musical accompaniment, sound effects, and screams. The closing reel, showing the opening night of the revival as well as the entire denouement, is also with dialogue. The recording of sound is well done, but the lack of dialogue in a "talking" close-up immediately following an audible scream is disconcerting.

"The Last Warning" is one of the best eerie mystery plays yet produced in sound pictures.

On the same bill are "On Guard," an all-talking comedy by the Collegians, and the International News, accompanied by the house orchestra.

METROPOLITAN

"NOAH'S ARK." Warner Bros.' sound production with dialogue passages, starring Dolores Costello, supported by George O'Brien, Guinn Williams and Noah Beery. Written by Darryl Francis Zanuck; directed by Michael Curtiz. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Even a memory that spans the whole history of the motion picture will not find it possible to recall any screen spectacle so vast as this cataclysmic drama that seeks to draw an analogy between the debacle of the Great War in our own century and the Deluge of Scriptural relations. That analogy may not be without its flagrant deficiencies and the situations marking the development of the war periods of the story may, to some, seem trite, but the great outstanding fact remains that in its Biblical sequences and the depiction of the Flood "Noah's Ark" begins where David Wark Griffith's "Intolerance" stopped, and affords a study in stagecraft that is staggering in its magnitude and profoundly impressive in its devastating realism.

Although predicated upon a supremely optimistic theme—that the war purged the world of greed and lust—the climacteric events in this prodigious fable pursue a course of uninterrupted havoc, accentuated in all their horror by sound effects of the most terrifying nature.

First the Oriental Express is plunged through a bridge and its belligerent survivors are herded in an inn near the French frontier where their hostilities become violent; the war breaks out and these same symbols of opposing forces are aligned in mortal combat; a bombardment imprisons them in a subterranean refuge where the preacher of the gospel points out that they are only undergoing what was the lot of the world as long ago as Genesis. It is here that the action, carried forward by the identical characters, reverts to the court of King Nephilim in Akkad, a city like unto Ur of the Chaldees, where plans are being made to honor the festival of Jaghut by sacrifices of the most beautiful virgins of the kingdom on the altar of a pagan god. Those imprisoned in the wartime cellar we see become the persecuted of an infidel dynasty until Noah receives a divine message to prepare an ark against the coming of the flood and to fear not for his loved ones. Then the scenes of unbelievable destruction that defy adequate description in any brief review and again a reversion to the war zone and the signing of the Armistice.

The heroic proportions of the Ark and the gathering in pairs of all the creatures that walked the earth, it seemed to me, were executed in a manner that lent dignity and impressiveness to the Bible story, but in other episodes liberties have been taken with events of Holy Writ that have an unfortunately opposite effect.

In the roles paralleling each other in the modern and biblical narratives, Dolores Costello, as Mary and Miriam; George O'Brien, as Travis and Japheth; Guinn Williams, as Travis' chum, Al, and Ham; Noah Beery, as Nickoloff and Nephilim, and Paul McAllister, as the minister and Noah, carry the burden of the drama and virtually the sum total of its spoken dialogue. Noah Beery's voice lends itself to particularly good recording. Others importantly cast include Louise Fazenda, Nigel de Brulier, Anders Randolf, Armand Kaliz, Myrna Loy and William V. Mong.

The synchronized orchestral accompaniment is studiously comprehensive of the picture's many moods and extremely helpful to the many climaxes during which the sound effects are so devised as to envelop the auditor in a titanic cacophony of all the chilling noises of catastrophe.

A minute consideration of so expansive a panorama is, of course, out of the question within the limits of a restricted newspaper report. "Noah's Ark" is a pageant of such majestic proportions that, whether its story is fancied or not, one would be ill-advised indeed to miss it.

EARLE

"INNOCENTS OF PARIS." Paramount all-talking and singing production, starring Maurice Chevalier. Directed by Richard Wallace. Reviewed Saturday night by Mary Porter Russell.

If "the idol of Paris, London, Buenos Aires and New York" wants to add Washington to the list of his conquests, it will be all right with me. This component part of our fair city is already there in spirit. It all happened during the opening five minutes of his picture—at the instant, to be exact, when he first narrowed those merry eyes of his in the famous Chevalier smile and sent forth rays of personality through the orchestra, back to the standees and thence up to the rafters. One of them struck and enveloped a group of us en route, and after that nothing else mattered.

It must be that the man is hypnotic. After all, he doesn't do anything that you haven't seen done before. Just another song and dance man, he would be, if it weren't for his glorious humor and that inner something which serves to clinch the old argument concerning kind hearts and simple faith and the utter futility of Norman blood. He has a kind heart, I know, and an accent that is altogether captivating. But maybe you'd rather hear something about the story.

There is a story, and it starts out to be a very good one, too, with Maurice rolling his junk cart through the dusk-enveloped mystery of Parisian streets, rescuing a small boy from drowning and adopting the urchin after making an unsuccessful attempt to deposit him with a grandfather, who is just one of those bad men, and a helpless young aunt, who starts the love fires burning.

After that it degenerates into the accepted formula for revue stars gone movie. The homely charm of the earlier surroundings is pushed into the background and the gifted one's talents are exploited through stage tryouts, cabarets, dress rehearsals and opening-night splendor, to the accompaniment always of clapping hands. Happily, no one dies at the crucial moment. It may be that our bubbling friend from across the seas fails to share Al Jolson's capacity for pathos. The worst that happens is a charge of attempted murder preferred by the sweetest girl in the world, of all people, just ten minutes prior to the opening curtain.

The dialogue and situations are strained and insipid at times, but always there is Maurice in compensation, and, rivaling him in appeal, that matchless little boy actor, David Durand. Margaret Livingston and John Miljan are cast to advantage in sophisticated roles and Mr. and Mrs. George Fawcett are lovable as Maurice's parents. Sylvia Beecher, in the feminine lead, adds beauty.

Bobby Folsom reappears in a short talking subject, "Typical Types," followed by George Broadhurst as a mildly amusing drunk in "Three o'Clock in the Morning." These are preceded by a newsreel and an orchestral overture, "Gems From Favorite Operas," in which Mr. Breeskin and his boys outdid themselves Saturday night to the enjoyment of an uncommonly appreciative audience.

"Handy Andy" will mend it for you. Where will you find him? See the advertisements under the heading of "Personals" in the classified section of today's Post.

PALACE

Because it is more gently innocuous, less flamboyant and not nearly so fantastic in development, this tranquil study in tropical placidity is a much more authentic, though perhaps less exciting, picture of indolence in the South Pacific than "White Shadows In the South Seas," with which it will inevitably be compared. Both are based on the same idea, both were directed by W. S. Van Dyke for Metro-Goldwin-Mayer and each was filmed upon the actual locale of its story in the glamorously picturesque islands of an equatorial ocean.

In the title role of "The Pagan," Ramon Novarro has a more believable character to impersonate than was allotted Monte Blue in "White Shadows." Instead of a beachcomber from the North, Senor Novarro appears as a half-caste native of the island on which he owns wide acreage of cocoanuts, sought by a white trader eager for the profits of the copra they can be made to produce. On the trader's sloop is another half-caste native, Tito, a girl sought by the pagan, Mr. Shoesmith, as a means of appeasing an enormous affection. It is from this circumstance that the drama derives its conflict—aided by gratuitous contributions of venom toward the money-minded interloper on the part of a young woman of questionable outlook and occupation with a more or less repressed love for the landowner she can not get, impersonated by Renee Adoree.

With the exception of one or two brief flashes of spunk and spirit revealed by the lad who is imposed upon at every turn, the action is lethargic, as should be the case in any honest picture of life in the tropics. There is, through it all, a vein of pleasant comedy, much of which is as ingenuous as the love making of the hero and heroine. To those not inured to the odd customs of the warm countries, there will be a touch of fascinating novelty in these two characters lolling about romantically in flower garlands and calico remnants with no concerns beyond the easy matter of being comfortable, kindly and happy. In the end a famished shark arranged things with the visiting trader so that they could continue so to the end of their days.

The three pivotal roles are sufficiently well played by Novarro, Dorothy Janis and Donald Crisp to lend the tale some vigor. The photoplay is crystal clear and adds to the charm of scenes that are of unblemished natural beauty.

Much of the interest in this film has been occasioned by the announcement that in it the star would reveal the voice that is to take him into grand opera. The advance notices proclaimed it a barytone, but it proves to be a tenor of agreeable quality and not at all of operatic caliber. There are moments when it is doubtful even if it is really Novarro who is doing the singing, although the faulty synchronization is more a matter of his ukulele than his voice.

The "Fifth Avenue" revue introduces Herbert Rawlinson as a genial and glib monologist, instead of master of ceremonies— for which in Jack Partington's scheme of things there is no place —and immediately following him the Caites brothers, dancers; Robert Cloy, tenor; Eleanor Verande and the Albertina Rasche Girls; Dolores, Eddy and Douglas, adagio experts, and Hector and his Pals, a unique dog act. The staging is rather more sumptuous than usual.

The M-G-M News, orchestra prelude and organ recessional complete the bill.

LITTLE THEATER

"THE WEAVERS." A film presentation of Gerhardt Hauptmann's play, "Die Weber," featuring Paul Wagener, Herman Picha and Wilhelm Dieterle. Directed by Friedrich Zelnick. Reviewed Saturday night by W. A. Whitney.

The Industrial Revolution has, since its inception in 1760, ever been a subject of profound study by students of sociology, but it has remained for Gerhardt Hauptmann, who, in 1912, won the Nobel Prize for literature, to dramatize the small, but nevertheless effective, revolt of the fustian weavers of the Silesian mountains during that momentous period when machinery and the factory system were being introduced into the textile industry, thus removing from the home a none-too-remunerative industry and further reducing the peasants to more and more abject poverty and starvation.

"The Weavers" is a comedyless drama of stark realism depicting the revolt of a group of weavers against the village textile plutocrat, Fabrikant Dreissiger, and his paymaster, Pfeiffer. Although there is no narrative in the usual sense of that word, interest is never lost, the force of the acting, the almost perfect characterizations, and the sheer dynamic power of the situations being sufficient to enthrall the spectator from start to finish.

On the technical side, "The Weavers" is as excellent as on its histrionic: the photography is exceptionally well done, the lighting is good and the direction is faultless.

"Captain Kidd's Kids," a Harold Lloyd comedy of an early vintage; the Paramount News, and "Serenade" by Frank Drdla, played by the Little Theater Trio, complete an enjoyable program.

THE STRAND

"THE PACE THAT KILLS." A drama of the narcotic evil. Directed by Norman S. Parker and William Conner. Presented by W. Nicholas Flattich. Reviewed Saturday night by J. F. Brady.

Sharp, swift and tragic are the results of the narcotic evil, as portrayed in the film, "The Pace That Kills."

Here, certainly, is not a picture for entertainment, and it is doubtful if the presentation of stories of this sort, in this manner, bring about the beneficial result which the producers hope to achieve.

The story of "The Pace That Kills" tells of the country boy who comes to the city, takes a job, falls in with a girl "who knows the ways," is innocently inoculated with the desire for "dope." They both go down, and down, and down, till the tragic end comes in suicide for each.

It shows to some extent the craving for drugs after one becomes an addict; the manner in which it is alleged narcotics are "peddled;" a Chinese joint in operation, and how crazed the drug user becomes. All of which indeed does not tend to make for joy.

If those who come in contact with this habit see this film, and profit by its pictured horrible result, then will it be worth while. The story is well directed, the photography excellent.

From a dramatic viewpoint, "The Pace That Kills" offers pretty Virginia Roye, the girl who leads the boy on, some wonderful opportunities for a display of her ability and she most creditably characterizes a girl of this kind—the shop girl, the sweetie, the girl of the street and the half-crazed addict. Owen Gorin, the nice-looking country boy, shows a deep study of his character—the innocent boy led on and the incessant addict. The supporting cast is good, but the entire story plays around these two.

Supplementing the feature is the Paramount News and a Hal Roach comedy, "Long Pants." The entire bill is synchronized with sound, but no voice.

FOX

"GIRLS GONE WILD." A William Fox sound picture, featuring Sue Carol and Nick Stuart, supported by William Russell, Roy D'Arcy, Hedda Hopper and notable cast. Directed by Lew Seiler. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

While there is some justification for the title—in a nice way—this picture is by no means so tawdry as its name implies. Not that it is any great shakes as drama, but combined with what threatened to be merely another exploitation of the recklessness of modern youth there is a bit of high-power police stuff that partially takes the curse off all that jazz.

The story is motivated by the misadventures of a young girl whose father is an influential citizen of great wealth who thinks he can square any account with the law by a wink at the arresting officer, the love of a traffic cop's son for the girl and the loyalty to his trust of the motorcycle policeman, whose plebeian calling leads to his son's ostracism from smart society just as he was about to win the scholarship. The injection of a fresh bootlegger into the picture to engender a gang war, his murder during a "block party" in a tough ward and the consequet call for police and work of a glorified sort by Dan Brown and his son "Bucky" to save the girl, serve to get the kid back into the good graces of the elite and everything ends nicely by the bedside of the senior Brown, who seemed to be getting well of the pistol wound.

Not material of the highest order, to be sure, but still a fast-moving, interesting and at times thrilling picture has been made of it. Sue Carol and Nick Stuart are happily cast as the boy and girl in the case and the late "Big Bill" Russell does splendidly with the role of the cop. They are really the only ones who matter, although it may be of interest that Lumsden Hare, Hedda Hopper, Mathew Betz, Leslie Fenton, John Darrow, Roy D'Arcy, Edmund Breese and Louis Natheaux add their presence to an ensemble that is considerably better than the matter with which it has to deal. Miss Carol evidently has learned several hay dance routines since the "Movietone Follies" was filmed.

On the stage, John Irving Fisher signalizes his tenth consecutive week as master of ceremonies by turning in a string of witty introductions aimed at Muriel and Fisher, dancers of the Bowery type; Mario and Lazarine, a pair of troubadors with the best voices heard at the Fox in many a moon; the tumbling clowns; Healy and Clifford, lightning tap dancers, the Pearl twins, acrobatic dance-and-songsters, and himself in a swell arrangement of "Just Like a Melody Out of the Sky," in which the piano takes a first verse and chorus and then executes a series of deftly interwoven counter melodies while the orchestra carries the air. A second number with the orchestra, "A Garden in the Rain," permitted the Foxettes to close the revue, but not before the Jazzmanians, under Mr. Brusiloff's direction, had scored a riot in a trick overture featuring trombone, trumpet and clarinet solos, and Samuel Korman, associate conductor, had clicked in "Lover, Come Back to Me," played as a violin solo with orchestral accompaniment.

Clark and McCullough in "The Honor System," an all-talking skit done in their best comedy vein; the Movietone News and the natural color fashion reel add to the variety of an extensive program.

COLUMBIA

"ALIBI." United Artists all-talking picture, based on the stage play "Nightstick," directed by Roland West. Cast led by Eleanor Griffith, Mae Busch, Chester Morris and Pat O'Malley. Reviewed Saturday night by C. Ransom.

This is a well-acted and vigorously directed crook melodrama in which the familiar underworld materials have been well shaken up and strewn into new patterns. The story is no more incredible than most of its kind, there is enough swift and vivid action to grip and hold the attention, especially toward the end, and it carries the commendable purpose of upholding the police and showing up the hero-gangster for the yellow rat that he is or ought to be.

But some day a genius will arise who will make an underworld film without a night club in it, or at least a night club without a row of lithe and legsome dancers. If he goes to the further extreme of omitting all crooks who have just been let out of Sing Sing, all who allege that the cops have planted guns on them, and all who squeal under the conjoined effects of dope and police compulsion, the public will arise and hail him. Leaving out gun-play would be too much to
